Mr. Farley Still Cheerful
High Priced Glory
Erasmus Laid the Egg
Printers Know Editors

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

James A. Farley, Postmaster-General and chief engineer in the big election, reaches Southampton, on his way to spend a holiday in Ireland, "as cheerful as ever," which must be quite cheerful considering the news he got on Wednesday the 4th.

Mr. Farley says we are in for "a prosperity greater than anything we ever have known," and that is "because the country will be built on a sound foundation." The word "sound" has several meanings. Mr. Farley's meaning is the good one.

Glory costs money and military glory is the most expensive kind.

The Japanese army wants for its next budget a total of six billion two hundred million yen, which is five times as much as the army cost for 1931. Our navy alone wants $500,000,000 for this year, and will spend less than one tenth of it on aviation.

Some learn slowly.

The world celebrates the 400th anniversary of the death of Erasmus; Bishop Manning of the Episcopal Church describes Erasmus as "the great, enlightened scholar, true humanist, advocate of international peace, earnest laborer for Christian unity," and thinks that if "the ideals of Erasmus had prevailed there would have been no great World War."

Others hold Erasmus responsible for the great religious war started by Martin Luther; "Erasmus laid the egg and Luther hatched it."

At the funeral of Clark Howell, able, earnest, highly respected editor of the Atlanta Constitution, the printers of Atlanta's three newspapers, the Constitution, the Journal and the Georgian, sent a great empty chair made of roses.

It is a good sign when printers like their editor. They know the editor better than he knows himself; they know when he is sincere.

Spain's civil war apparently is not yet as bad as it might, and may be, no poison gas having been used thus far, on the insurgents in their trenches around Madrid, or on helpless women and children in the city. When the gas war starts, if it does start, the world will learn about future wars.

Mr. E. C. Romfh, president of the First National Bank of Miami, which stayed open when other banks closed, sends to friends, expressing his view of history, six lines, written by Lord Byron in 1814:

"Here is the moral of all human tales,
'Tis but the same rehearsal of the past;
First freedom and then glory; when that fails
Wealth, vice, corruption, barbarism at last,
And history, with all her volumes vast,
Hath but one page."

We have no civil war, but little "civil wars" are developing inside labor unions. Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, asks the United States to help settle the fight between the seamen's unions, the regular union that wants to work, the other that wants to strike. Considerably more serious is the war between Mr. Lewis, of the miners, and Mr. Green, of the Federation of Labor—serious for union labor generally. You see no civil war in the empire of capitalism.

It is hard not to buy that which is better. Foreign countries try to keep out American automobiles; but if they make them half as good, they cost twice as much. American manufacturers expect to sell 500,000 automobiles in foreign countries, this year.

Nineteen hundred and thirty-seven, as demonstrated by the tremendous attendance at New York's public and private exhibitions, will be the greatest automobile year in history.

Some ingenious person in Alfred P. Sloan, Jr.'s, Waldorf-Astoria exhibit has arranged a miniature Chevrolet car with mirrors multiplying the car, so that 12,680 cars are seen in reflection.

The automobile industry has done better than that since the early days, with real cars.

An important new feature of American life is the trailer, a small house on wheels behind the automobile, enabling the whole family to wander off and "rough it," with comfortable beds, hot showers, electric cookers, screened windows. General Motors is said to consider adding trailers to its "line." The first big concern that does so will develop a new and profitable auxiliary branch of the automobile industry. Then Americans will have three "homes." The house, the car, the trailer.

Girl, 6, Nearly Freezes In Barrel for 7 Hours

Hiding Causes Roxbury Scare

JOAN HUGHES

POLICE FIND CHILD AFTER LONG QUEST IN COLD

Six-year-old Joan Hughes of Woodcliffe street, Roxbury, was found huddled, half frozen, in an ash barrel in the rear of her home today after a seven-hour search by frantic parents and police.

The youngster, according to the mother, apparently failed to return home for fear she would be punished by her parents after she was sent on an errand.

Patrolman Frank White of Roxbry Crossing station found the child in a semi-conscious condition at 1:30 a. m.

Crying, pale from the cold and shivering because of insufficient clothing to protect her, Joan was rushed to City Hospital, where she was given emergency treatment for exposure.

HELD AT HOSPITAL

While her mother, Mrs. James Hughes, went to the hospital—happy over her discovery and hoping the child "doesn't suffer any serious illness"—hospital attendants said Joan was recovering but would be held another day for observation.

According to the mother, Joan was sent across the street about 6 o'clock last night on an errand.

Meeting a little friend, the mother said, the child stopped to talk and later, fearing she would be punished because she stayed out so long, decided to take refuge in the barrel.

"You can't imagine how happy I was when Joan was found," Mrs. Hughes said to a Boston American reporter.

"At 6:30 last night I became greatly worried when Joan didn't come back. I went to the store and learned she had been there about half an hour ago.

IN BITTER COLD

"I didn't know what to think. I looked all over the neighborhood. By 8 o'clock I was frantic.

"I began to think all sorts of things. Maybe she had been picked up by somebody, I thought.

"It was bitterly cold outside, as I ran out of the house every little while to look for her. I must have passed the barrel where she was a hundred times.

"Joan told me later that she could hear me and her daddy pass, but she was still afraid. She told me, 'I stopped crying every time you and daddy passed by.'

"The barrel was just one of those places we just didn't think to look. I hope she doesn't suffer any serious illness as a result of it. I'm so happy, though, that she's been found."

Woman, 86, Dies In Fire at East Weymouth Home

Mrs. Elizabeth M. Sandberg, 86, of Brook street, East Weymouth, was found suffocated today in bed at her three-room cottage after her clothes had caught on fire from a kerosene stove in the kitchen.

Deputy Fire Chief Fred Webb discovered the body when he responded to a fire alarm sent in by neighbors who noticed smoke coming out of the cottage windows.

According to Weymouth Fire Chief J. Ralph Bacon, Mrs. Sandberg's clothes caught fire when she went to light the stove. He said she had apparently fallen back into an adjoining bedroom and onto the bed.

He said she was suffocated from the smoke which filled the bedroom. Although there were burns on her body, only a portion of her clothing was burned.

Mrs. Sandberg, a widow, lived alone in the cottage and had resided there for 20 years, according to her sister-in-law, Mrs. J. Groezinger, who lived across the street.

REVERE BOMB FOUND TO BE FIREWORKS

An explosion which damaged the rear porch of the home of City Councillor William H. Gallagher was ascribed by police, after investigation, to a bunch of five-inch Fourth of July "salutes."

The Gallagher home is at 265 Campbell avenue and is half of a duplex house. Gallagher, one of three mayoralty candidates, had complained of a threat several days ago and has been under police protection.

The explosion is believed to have occurred late last night. The sound, heard by several persons, was ignored, having been considered a backfire until the damage to the porch was discovered today.

Sergeant Charles Van Amburgh of the state police said the blast was a slight one but caused more damage than might have been ex-

SEAS KILL 3 ON FREIGHTER BOUND HERE

Gripped in the teeth of an angry winter gale, the Boston-bound freighter Tweedbank lost her captain and two of her crew today and was in imminent peril of sinking in the North Atlantic.

Captain Arthur MacKenzie was swept from his post on the bridge and smashed to death against a bulkhead.

Two sailors, posted as lookouts, were swept overboard to certain doom by another fierce sea.

And the dramatic story of the 55 surviving seamen's fight for their lives came crackling through the air from the radio set of an operator who was trapped in his cabin.

AIR AID APPEAL

His terse messages, which flashed out twice, ceased after he told of the skipper's death.

The last words were to repeat that the ship had "hove to" in a spot about 700 miles east of this port.

STOCKS STRONG

New York, Nov. 17 (INS)—Stocks maintained a generally strong tone today, despite mild profit-taking in sections. Gains of $1 to $2 in active leaders were retained, with a few special issues jumping as much as $6.

Amusements, utilities, rails and merchandising shares were prominent. Carriers also were pushed upward.

New highs for the year were scattered through the list, topped by American Telephone with a jump of better than $2.

Steels and motor gains were limited in most cases to small fractions.

By THOMAS A. LOAYZA
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Madrid, Nov. 17—Rebel airplanes rained bombs on Madrid today as invading insurgents advanced slowly through the University City section under a cascade of artillery cross-fire.

Fleets of Rebel bombers unleashed their death-dealing missiles on the model prison in the Casa de Campo, the Montana barracks and other buildings. Several bombs fell near the former royal palace and the Italian embassy.

Loyalist troops threw up a smoke screen to impede the raiders.

Self-Registration For Unemployed, Roosevelt Plan

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP) — President Roosevelt disclosed today he was considering a system of counting the unemployed by a method of self-registration.

The President made known the unemployment census plans as he concluded arrangements to leave tonight for Buenos Aires.

He said the self-registration plan toward which he was working personally would be much simpler and cheaper than a door to door canvass.

The latter method, he added, would soon become out of date and necessitate frequent periodic canvasses.

$125,000,000 N. E. YULE PAYOFF

Jingle bells and jingle cash was the merry song of Christmas Club, Inc. today as that organization—along with the Mutual Savings Bank Association—revealed that a fiscal pudding of nearly $125,000,000 will be shared by thousands of New England business men during the Yuletide season.

The announcement came in the wake of a supreme court decision which assures depositors of the closed Belmont Trust Company $225,000 in dividends.

Peppered with Christmas club savings and substantial pay raises, the pudding, with its basic ingredient of consumer buying power, will be a generous sample of the nation's $355,000,000 pudding.

All this to be distributed within the next two weeks—providing that 7,500,000 Christmas club depositors feel like spending it. And they usually do.

$12,000,000 TO MASS.

In Massachusetts, for instance, there are 250,000 depositors who have been salting away Christmas spending money since last January. At their fingertips today they have more than $12,000,000.

Some 160,000 Bostonians will receive about $7,000,000. Wage increases, affecting business in the metropolitan area, total $8,900,000.

Some 110,000 textile workers are in line for a 10 per cent pay envelope boost, effective Nov. 30. Much intrigued are local merchants with the fact that these Christmas-minded workers collect their boost during the Christmas season.

Trigger calculations with bank account totals by Herbert F. Rawll, founder of Christmas Club, Inc., shows that the average individual payment to some 7,500,000 club members in 5000 banks over the country will be $46.50.

HEAVY XMAS SPENDING

Rawll points out that 42 per cent, or a computed $149,000,000 is dead certain for Christmas buying. Questionnaires answered by members disclosed this fact.

D. S. Sylvester, executive manager of the Savings Bank Association of Massachusetts, chimes in with the announcement that Christmas Club savings have zoomed 15 per cent over last year.

Hopeful executives at a meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce expressed the belief that wage increases would reach 434,500 citizens before December 20.

The payments, representing 20 per cent for savings department depositors, will raise the total paid in that department to 80 per cent.

Commercial depositors will get 10 per cent, raising their total to 42½ per cent.

C. I. O. REBELLION IN A. F. OF L. GAINING STRENGTH

METAL TRADES STILL SEEKING EXPULSION OF LEWIS GROUP

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 17 (INS)—Resolutions supporting the industrial union rebellion in American Federation of Labor ranks headed by John L. Lewis today outnumbered measures of opposition four to one as the federation annual convention swung into its second day.

Eight proposals to join the suspended rebels and take them back into the A. F. of L. fold were dropped in the federation's resolutions committee hopper

Only two resolutions for expelling the rebels and taking punitive action against the Lewis faction were presented, both sponsored by John P. Frey, president of the powerful metal trades department of the federation.

MEASURES FAVOR CIO

Measures favorable to the CIO forces embraced all sorts of friendly gestures to the faction which Lewis heads and which, in defiance of A. F. of L. edict, has set out to organize the unorganized under a setup embracing single unions for each big industry.

In many of these, the sponsors declared that they favored the industrial form of union as opposed to the traditional craft-union organization of the American Federation of Labor.

The opposition resolutions introduced by Frey called bluntly for complete expulsion of the CIO unions and for a boycott against union labels of the Lewis units.

All measures taken under consideration immediately by the busy resolutions committee, and its members, headed by Chairman Matthew Woll of the photo-engravers, began the work of drafting a report on the proposals before them.

PEACE PLAN OFFERED

The Wisconsin State Federation of Labor plan for settling the A. F. of L.-CIO dispute by arbitration and an agreement on the part of the A. F. of L. to participate in industrial organization drives, headed the resolutions favorable to the CIO.

The resolutions involving labor's big family quarrel headlined approximately a hundred proposals before the Federation convention today. Other measures dealt with the labor legislative program, its internal policies, and the ever-present move to establish an independent labor or farm-labor party in the United States.

Heading a strong movement against expulsion of the ten unions of Lewis' committee, President William Green revealed to International News Service that he saw no way to heal the breach between the new and bumptious industrial union movement of Lewis and the traditionally craft-union A. F. of L. He simply felt that expulsion would be bad strategy.

Instead of expulsion, President Green demanded within the inner A. F. of L. councils, that the federation convention adopt a resolution approving the executive council's suspension of the ten Lewis unions, and let the matter stand.

Such a step, Green contended, would leave the federation free to advise its members truthfully that the A. F. of L. did not throw out the Committee for Industrial Organization, but rather that the Lewis forces themselves took the step cracking the half century old united front of organized labor wide open.

Green's sentiments keynoted a jittery A. F. of L. convention torn with indecision over the vital fight precipitated by the defiant drive of John Lewis, of the United Mine Workers to go out and organize unorganized workers under a setup embracing single unions for each big industry.

There were stubborn forces within this convention bent on expelling the Lewis unions once and for all, but they no longer predominated.

Fiery speeches denouncing the CIO for treason were tempered with the conclusion that even now the A. F. of L. would be glad to see the CIO abandon its defiant industrial union drive and rejoin the ranks of the old guard.

But John L. Lewis' unions offered no temporizing in reply. From the luxurious offices of the United Mine Workers in Washington, real headquarters of the CIO, came nothing that even looked like an olive branch, and Green, in an exclusive interview, revealed that he knew there would be no peace-making.

A list of resolutions presented by Robert J. Watt, secretary and treasurer of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, featured the proposals dropped into the convention hopper.

BOSTON'S COLD SNAP ENDS

Boston's current cold snap had ended this afternoon, as the thermometer swelled up to 36 degrees at 3 p. m.

Early morning workers, however, wended their ways through temperatures under the 20 mark, accompanied by overcast skies and a chill wind.

The mercury is expected to soar higher tomorrow—but by Wednesday night lower temperatures are expected to return.

Low temperatures, accompanied by an early morning wave of chimney fires, were general in New England early in the day. In Methuen the reading was 10 above; in Concord, 16; Billerica, 14; Brockton, 14; New Bedford, 8; Buzzards Bay, 14.

A sudden gale swept Newport, Vt., and left the mercury dwindled to a six degree above reading. There were snow flurries in New Hampshire, and low temperatures were general in Maine.

The record cold day of November 17 in Boston was in 1924, when the mercury hit 14.

WARD DEMANDS VOTE RECOUNT

Charging intimidation of voters, the introduction of "repeaters," and other forms of chicanery, Michael J. Ward, defeated Democratic candidate for the state Legislature from Ward 21, Brighton, today petitioned Superior Court for a review of the election.

Ward asked for a restraining order to prevent the Boston election commission from destroying or disposing of the records in the contest resulting in the election of Andrew J. Carlin, his Republican opponent.

Declaring that in 118 precincts of the ward he received 8636 votes to Carlin's 8805, Ward charged the majority was due to fraudulent voting in various forms.

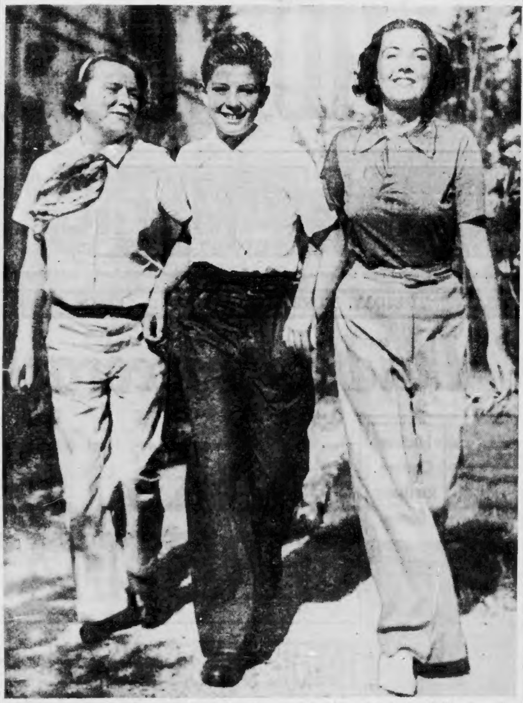
Three Who Aid Police in Death Probe



Theories of a murder with a "planted gun" angle are being investigated by California police following the death of Reid Russell, whose body was found on the estate of Gouverneur Morris at Manhattan Beach, Cal. The body was found by "Jimmy" Kirkwood, son of Lila Lee, screen actress. The three persons pictured here are being questioned in an effort to find any cause for suicide of Russell. They are, left to right, Mrs. Morris, who revealed a "suicide bet," Jimmy Kirkwood and Lila Lee, snapped on the Morris estate. (Story on Page 2.)

REVERE HOME IS "BOMBED"

pected because the porch boards were weak.

The blast blew a hole, about two feet wide, in the latticed side of the porch and loosened two 2x4 supports.

Van Amburgh, who is assistant to his father, Captain Van Amburgh, state police firearms expert, found black powder stains on the lattice and baseboard.

FIND UNEXPLODED SALUTE

The first two Revere police officers sent to the scene found nothing significant, other than the damage to the porch.

Later, however, Lieut. Henry Tracy and Inspector William Gibson went to the house and returned with one unexploded five-inch salute and some fragments of the same green color.

Van Amburg said he thought this discovery was consistent with the type of explosion.

Powder-marked boards and other objects were taken to state police headquarters for careful examination by Van Amburgh, who told reporters:

CAUSES REVERE STIR

"The wood was old and weak, partly rotted, and easily fell apart. There was probably a cluster of salutes of the type found by the Revere officers."

News of the occurrence traveled like wildfire through Revere, causing excitement at the opening of the polls this noon.

Gallagher had been under guard of Special Officer James L. Dugan since he reported being threatened by a man in a crowd at a rally.

Two men told police they heard an explosion last night, shortly before 11 o'clock, and one of them saw a black sedan stopped in the middle of Campbell avenue, in front of Gallagher's house. They both thought, however, the sound was a backfire.

MERCHANT CALLS POLICE

Alfred McDonald, who lives in the other side of the Gallagher house and who was one of those who heard the blast, discovered the damaged porch this morning.

Clair Robbins, who has a grocery across the street, and who heard the noise and saw the automobile, notified police as soon as he learned of the damage that had been done to the dwelling.

Gallagher did not arrive home from his night's political rallies until 3 a. m. Mrs. Gallagher was at home throughout the evening, but heard no sound. She had gone to bed early.

9 BAY STATE CITIES VOTE FOR MAYORS

Polls were opened in nine Massachusetts cities today for primary elections of candidates to municipal office with mayoralty contests listed in six communities.

Cities choosing mayoralty candidates in addition to other nominees for municipal office include Revere, Quincy, Peabody, Fall River, Haverhill and Gardner. Off-year contests are being held in Lawrence, Newburyport and Taunton.

Interest in the mayoralty and other contests in Revere, Fall River and Peabody indicates a record primary vote in each of those cities, while, conversely, the quiet campaigning in Quincy, Haverhill and Gardner bring the likelihood of light voting there.

Similar light voting is expected in Lawrence, Newburyport and Taunton, due to the fast there are no mayoralty contests there.

Revere expects that at least 70 per cent of its registered vote of 15,750 will be cast, due to the intense interest in the mayoralty fight in which Councilman William Gallagher has been giving Mayor James C. O'Brien a fierce struggle.

BETWEEN TWO MEN

Timothy J. Kelley is also entered in this contest, but Gallagher and O'Brien have been doing all the campaigning and the battle lies strictly between them.

By a provision of the city charter, a candidate gaining 51 per cent of the vote in the event 80 per cent of the total vote is cast, is declared elected.

While the bulk of Revere's interest is centered in the mayoralty contest, there are also sharp battles for minor offices with a total of 89 candidates vying for 17 posts to be filled.

Four candidates are in the field against Mayor James E. McVann of Peabody, who is seeking nomination for re-election. They include William F. Regan, John J. Ring, Edward Ankeles and Councilman Joseph B. O'Keefe. Also to be nominated are school committee candidates and those for councillor-at-large and trustee of Peabody Institute.

9 CANDIDATES, 1 JOB

In Fall River there are nine candidates for the two mayoralty nominations. They include Mayor Alexander C. Murray, former Mayor Edmond Talbot, former Senator Walter McLane, Representative Frank O'Brien, Dr. Patrick W. Boylan, Jerome P. Fogwell, William T. Waterhouse, Frank X. Perron and School Committeeman Peter Harrington.

A total of 116 candidates are listed for the nominations to the city council and school committee.

Quincy expects a light vote with top place in the mayoralty contest conceded to Mayor Thomas S. Burgin, while former Mayor Thomas J. McGrath and City Council President Laurence J. Curtin fight it out for the other nomination.

Mayor George E. Dalrymple of Haverhill, hopeful of being named for re-election, has four opponents in Senator Charles A. McAree, John L. Lyons, David J. Coddaire and George F. Ramsey. Twelve other candidates seek nomination as aldermen, while seven are out for school committee posts.

FIELD OF 48

In Gardner Mayor James M. Timpanny is being opposed by Eugene O. Turcotte and Fred E. Perry. Twelve candidates will be nominated for councillor-at-large.

Lawrence voters will nominate four candidates for two aldermanic posts and four for school committee from a field of 48. Newburyport balloting will be restricted to nomination of candidates for ward council.

Less than one-third of the Lawrence registered voters had gone to the polls by 1 o'clock, officials announced. In the 33 precincts 10,008 votes of the 38,500 registered voters had been cast. The polls are open until 6 p. m.

Taunton has contests for municipal council in three of the city's eight wards and is also choosing six candidates from a field of nine to contest for three school committee posts.

Voting Hours

Following are the hours of voting in the nine cities holding primaries today.

Fall River	10 a. m. to 8 p. m.
Gardner	8 a. m. to 4 p. m.
Haverhill	6 a. m. to 4 p. m.
Lawrence	6 a. m. to 6 p. m.
Newburyport	6 a. m. to 4 p. m.
Peabody	5:45 a. m. to 4 p. m.
Quincy	10 a. m. to 8 p. m.
Revere	Noon to 8 p. m.
Taunton	10 a. m. to 8 p. m.

3 Women Held As Lynn Vagabonds

Three women were held in $2000 bail each today for the grand jury after they had pleaded not guilty in Lynn court to charges of being vagabonds.

They appealed after Judge Ralph W. Reeve found them guilty and sentenced them to Sherborn for acting suspiciously in the shopping center. The women are Mrs. Rose Tortino, 35, of Providence, R. I.; Mrs. Lucy Calise, 34, New York City; and Mrs. Mary DeStefano, 31, of Providence, R. I.

Another woman, Mrs. Carmella Florio, 30, Providence, R. I., was found not guilty on a charge of acting suspiciously.

Bet-Suicide Probers Clash

Los Angeles, Nov. 17 (INS)—A showdown loomed today in the spectacular investigation of the "garden swing" death mystery on the estate of Gouverneur Morris, famous author, as two official groups openly clashed on the evidence.

Coroner Frank Nance insisted that Reid Russell, handsome 28-year-old scion of a prominent Virginia family and friend of the Morrises, died on the garden swing where his body was found, a factor indicating suicide.

Clyde Plummer, chief investigator for the district attorney, argued just as firmly that Russell probably was carried to the swing after death, which would indicate murder.

A report, expected from E. C. Crossman, ballistic expert, on whether the rust-barreled automatic pistol clutched in Russell's right hand had been fired in recent months, was expected to determine whether the body would be exhumed for examination to fix the caliber of the death bullet.

MORRIS DISTRESSED

Meanwhile, Morris and his comely wife, Ruth, distressed over the hubbub of recent days, flew to Fort Miller ranch, near Fresno, where Morris hopes to find the privacy he needs to complete a story.

At the same time Mrs. Victoria Russell, white-haired mother of the dead man, whose insistence he had been murdered caused the investigation to be reopened, today revealed that Russell was worried about a love affair.

Mrs. Russell also said that her son had obtained a divorce from Mrs. Lorraine Russell, Texas girl, October 16, 1935. They were married July 27, 1932, and lived together only one day, Mrs. Russell told investigators. Russell was first reported a bachelor.

Morris and his wife, supported by Lila Lee, film actress, reiterated before leaving for Fresno that Russell had been despondent over the loss of his job with an automobile agency, was worried about money matters and had frequently threatened to commit suicide while visiting at the Morris home.

RUSSELL GRATEFUL

Morris also made public a letter from Stephen Bonsal, former charge d'affaires at the American embassy in Tokyo, now in Washington, in which the diplomat recalled meeting Russell and revealed the dead man's state of mind.

Bonsal, Morris' brother-in-law, said: "I recall very distinctly during my stay at Manhattan beach the unfortunate young man told me on at least two occasions how much indebted he was to you, Ruth and Lila.

"Once, at least, he said that but for the hospitality you had shown he would not have been able to face his isolation in California."

Miss Lee and her son, James Kirkwood, 12, who noticed Russel's car beside a barn near the house and launched the search which led to the discovery of Russell's body, remained in the Morris home today to give what aid they could to the authorities in the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Morris.

Evidence Missing In R. I. "Pool" Case

Providence, R. I., Nov. 17 (AP)—Important evidence gathered by police in a raid last April at the home of Cameron O'Connor, alleged headquarters for a horse-race pool in Rhode Island, is missing as O'Connor and three co-defendants face trial, Warwick police revealed today.

The announcement followed by 24 hours the discovery that Acting Inspector John McKnight, star prosecution witness, who led the raiding party, is missing.

The discovery forced postponement for a week of trial of O'Connor, John Rutter, Leonard Osterman and Thomas Scanlon on gambling conspiracy indictments in Kent County Superior Court.

Evidence missing including slips of paper on which raiding officers wrote down telephone numbers and betting orders which came in to the O'Connor house while police were there, Inspector Samuel Henderson said.

launching of a dual counter-attack on both enemy flanks, with government gains claimed. Moorish troops in one part of the University City were forced back to their "original positions" from the Philosophy Faculty Building, a communique said.

POPULACE FLEEING

A part of the rebel forces was surrounded and a quantity of war materials seized. It was admitted insurgents reached the Casa Valasquez during the night.

Terrified by word that the rebels had occupied most of the $25,000,000 university group and smashed forward to the North Station, residents of the entire area fled to the eastern part of the capital.

Fires, sending up great pillars of black and gray smoke at a dozen points in the western part of town, added to the horror resulting from a double night air raid in which at least 70 were killed and 150 wounded.

CLAIMS 82 PLANES WRECKED

Thousands of men were put to work tearing up pavements and strengthening barricades in the threatened section, preparing to defend the city one street at a time.

Loyalist airplanes meanwhile sallied forth again to strike back at the latest air raids, and a government communique asserted that 82 rebel airplanes had either been forced down or destroyed on the ground.

Death and devastation descended from the dark sky upon Madrid last night as insurgent troops hammered the wretched capital's western edge with cannon and tanks.

It was the first night air attack on the city in more than three months and it was one of the worst this torn metropolis has yet suffered.

I was in the American embassy in the northeastern section of the city, speaking with the American charge d'affaires, Eric C. Wendelin.

At 6:45 p. m. we heard the faint hum of airplane motors. We listened tensely as the humming grew into a roar.

DEATH COMES FLYING

We guessed, of course, that General Franco's "blackbirds of death" were on another expedition. Our guess was confirmed when suddenly we heard the burst of machine gun fire from the capital's anti-aircraft batteries.

I dashed out of the embassy, leaped into my automobile and told my chauffeur to make haste to the Telephone Building, Madrid's skyscraper, 15 blocks west.

In Castellana boulevard we were halted by Red militia guards who ordered us to put out the automobile's headlights. All street lights were doused. We were forced to drive slowly, groping our way through the streets, resounding with the explosions of the air bombs and the reverberations of the artillery salvoes in the outskirts.

SEES FLAMES SPREAD

As we motored out of Cibeles square, I saw a huge blaze straight ahead. It was a Belgian-owned lumber mill aflame. The roaring of the great fire nearly drowned out the bursting of bombs nearby, the rattle of machine gun fire and the droning of airplane motors.

RITES Planned for SHOBE

BURIAL TO BE IN DETROIT

Decision was made by a heart-broken widow today to bury the shattered body of her husband, John H. Shobe, intrepid Boston flier, in Detroit, the scene of his training and his earliest air exploits.

Shobe was the pilot of the plane that crashed near Syracuse, N. Y., as he carried a Nashua, N. H., man on a needless mercy flight to Minnesota.

The body of Miss Priscilla Murphy, 16-year-old Brookline aviatrix, who was with Shobe, arrived in Brookline today.

Henry Nadeau, the third victim of the tragedy, will be buried Thursday at Nashua after a mass at St. Aloysius Church.

Widow Prostrate

Shobe's widow, who lost a plane race with death to reach his bedside by less than an hour, was reported prostrated in a Syracuse hotel.

Meanwhile Department of Commerce officials were busy probing the cause of the tragedy.

Definite evidence was uncovered that the plane was traveling at high speed from the fact that the plane's motor was found 1000 feet from the wreckage, it was said.

The ship's radio was also found to be missing, and efforts are being made to learn whether it was destroyed in the fire which consumed the plane or was stolen by a souvenir hunter.

Investigation also indicated that Shobe was flying by contact, that is, by watching the ground, and not by instrument.

Misunderstanding

The most tragic feature of the flight as uncovered by the investigation was the revelation that it was undertaken through a misunderstanding on the part of Nadeau.

He is reported to have received a letter from his father expressing hope he would see him before he died, and the son, believing his father to be dying, arranged the flight.

Word from Minnesota indicated that the father was in good health and that his letter had merely expressed a desire to see his son.

Lost Girl, 4, Sings, Dances For Police

Four-year-old Katherine Kavanaugh of 6 Allen road, Brighton, is the Shirley Temple of Boston as far as the police officers of the Brighton station are concerned.

Today tiny Katherine was seized with wanderlust and boarded a street car. She was put off at Cambridge and Washington streets, Brighton, where Sergeant Frank Luzinski found her. The sergeant took her to the station. She could only lisp her first name and her description was broadcast over the radio.

During the hour she waited for her parents to appear Katherine entertained the officers with popular songs and danced until she puffed. She even sang "My Country 'Tis of Thee" over the phone for the benefit of the reporters at police headquarters.

Mother Awaits "Moses" Baby

Pearl River, La., Nov. 17 (AP)—Mrs. Louis Crawford, 24-year-old wife of a Works Progress Administration worker, looked forward today to the return to her of an eight-day-old baby she bore in solitude so her husband would not know of its birth.

Judge Robert D. Jones ruled that welfare workers should return the child to Mrs. Crawford, who earlier had declared a dog brought the baby to her doorstep. Mrs. Crawford admitted she invented the dog story in order to conceal her maternity from her 44-year-old husband.

Crawford made no comment on the case today although he has said he no longer would live with his wife "after this thing is over."

Conscience

Bowling Green, O., Nov. 17 (AP)—David E. Austin of Toledo, said his car accidentally struck a plump pheasant the first day of the hunting season. He stopped to retrieve it when another car screeched to a halt.

"I feared it might be an officer and I haven't a hunting license so I drove off without the bird. The fellow behind me picked it up and scooted away," moaned Austin.

Shobe, Safe Flier

He Never Took Chances

Friends Tell Tales Of Airman's Care For Others

By JAMES F. DOOLING

"Keep on the sidewalk with that two-wheeler, Dick. Remember, even a bike can't compete with an automobile."

Small Richard Shobe, whose father, Johnny Shobe, bought him a bicycle a few weeks ago, will remember those words a decade or so from now. So will his brother, Albert.

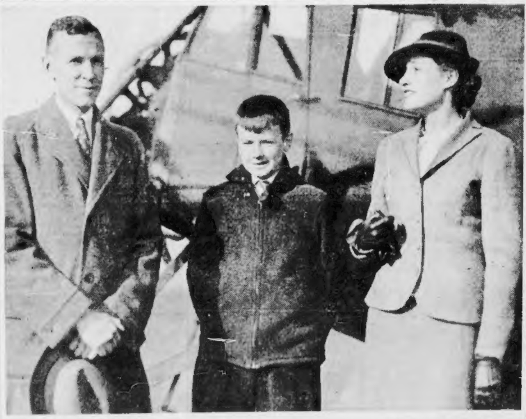
Maybe they'll know, and maybe they'll understand fully then, that they had a father engaged in what was—even in 1936—a pioneer industry.

But they will never forget, and their mother will never forget, and scores and scores of persons who entrusted their lives to Johnny Shobe will never forget, that before all else, Johnny Shobe thought of safety.

Do you doubt that Johnny Shobe was a "safe" pilot? That he thought of safety before glory or money or fame? Or of any of the nonentities that go to make up the "things that count" on this terrestial sphere—or above its thin surface?

Well . . .

Before Johnny Shobe joined the Stinson flying service in the early twenties, he flew a year or so for



DR. W. P. MURPHY WILLIAM MURPHY PRICILLA MURPHY

He was in his own twenties then. But he won a top prize in a national contest then for flying a ship he had never handled before in his life. And when they gave him the medal, he said:

"I just used a little common sense. I didn't take any chances, but I got all I could from the ship within the margin of safety. That's always a good bet."

There is a young man named Eddie Stephen who makes pictures for this paper. He likes to fly. Fact is, he has probably flown with Johnny Shobe as much as any other Greater Boston photographer since Johnny first took a job with American Airways in Boston.

It was hard to get Ed talking. He sort of choked up, because it was only a few days ago that Johnny Shobe was telling him:

"You're not taking any chances now, I wouldn't let you. Get in there, and remember you're the boss of that ship. You're running the plane. She isn't running you. Only be careful."

Stephen was doing some solo flying because he had had better than eight hours of Johnny Shobe's tutelage—and because, he admits himself, Johnny "made it all look so easy."

Eddie was alive today to tell about this. Johnny Shobe was dead.

Eddie remembered too that a girl by the name of Vera Brown, who is a feature writer today with the Detroit Times, got her first flying experience with Johnny Shobe.

Bet it'll be a shock for her. Johnny used to kid her some, although he didn't talk much. He used to tell her:

"Take it easy, sister. There's nothing to be scared about. Flying is a safe game if you're not too bold.

"Anybody can be a bold pilot. But there's a big difference between an old pilot and a bold pilot. I aim to be old."

Johnny was almost 40 years old.

Bill Jones has had a lot of flying experience with Johnny Shobe, even if he has a wife and four youngsters. Bill makes pictures, too. Bill said:

"One day the office was on my ear to beat the rest of the boys with a picture of a ship wrecked in the harbor. Johnny was flying me.

"Of course I got the usual 'Don't take any chances, now!' But I wanted my pictures.

"We got down the harbor and there was a fog. Oh, a nice fog. If there wasn't, the picture wouldn't have been there to make. I said to Johnny:

"'How about getting a little lower? Come on, now! I've got to get that shot.'

"Johnny looked back over the cockpit for a split second and retorted:

"'I don't like to see you miss a good picture, Bill, but for your safety and my good name I won't drop below a thousand.'"

He did drop, though, Bill explained. To a shade under a thousand. No more, no less.

So Bill got his picture and the Joneses got back their father and the Boston Evening American got back its photographer.

Strike Storm

Another gentleman who works for the Boston Evening American in rather a major capacity didn't want his wife worried about this, but he was probably as close to death with Johnny Shobe not so many years ago as anyone else—until Johnny flew his last flight.

"One of Johnny's ships was taking me to Albany from Chicago in March," he said. "We ran into a storm. It wasn't on the books, because Johnny was always careful about checking ahead on storms.

"But we ran into a storm, anyhow. We learned afterward that we were near Dunkirk when we hit it—near the Pennsylvania-New York state line.

"John sat in his seat still as a stone. He didn't rattle the pilot. He just kept looking out.

"Sometimes we were down as low as 50 or 75 feet. John offered only one suggestion—'Try and find a railroad track. There won't be any buildings to crash into there.'

"It was because he was looking out that he spotted the Welland Canal and made port at Tonawanda.

"We never knew until it was all over that Death was riding on the tail of the ship all the time. I suspected it, but Johnny didn't let on.

"He was as cool as ice when we landed, cracking up the tail landing gear. But he didn't let on. He was game."

Of course, you could go on like this indefinitely. But why? Anyone who ever had any contact with Johnny Shobe knew from even a passing contact that he was what he was.

This is just sort of "in memoriam."

Be it written on his epitaph that he was foremost a "safe" flier, but that he gave up his own life for another at the last.

PARENTS ANGRY IN WELLESLEY

Parents of more than 75 children attending the Isaac Sprague school, Wellesley, threatened today to keep their boys and girls home "on strike" against a reported plan to double up certain classes.

At a stormy meeting of the Sprague School Parent-Teacher's association, it was charged that proposed realignment of classes at the school is to be on a "social standing" basis, with poorer pupils crowded together and richer pupils segregated.

Changes in school district lines were also sharply criticised at the Parent-Teacher meeting.

James D. Breenahan, chairman of a special investigating committee, asserted that a former superintendent of Wellsley schools was ousted because he opposed school district shifts discriminating against "certain groups of pupils."

Speakers at the meeting also charged that a "real estate angle" entered into the school district question.

Superintendent of Schools Edward Miner and members of the Wellesley school board were asked to come to the meeting and answer questions.

J. P. MORGAN BACK FROM TRIP ABROAD

BATTLES QUIZZING REPORTERS

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—J. P. Morgan returned home today from a long vacation in England and Scotland, and successfully met a barrage of questions ranging anywhere from Mrs. Wallie Simpson to the Roosevelt landslide.

The financier, who usually avoids interviews, consented to see reporters in his sitting room on the Queen Mary, but they got precious little out of him.

Before anybody could ask him a question, Morgan announced:

"I'm not going to say anything about anything."

FEELING FINE

"Well, how are you feeling?" he was asked.

"I'm feeling fine, thank you."

He appeared to have recovered completely from the illness with which he was stricken last spring. He had a ruddy complexion and seemed to be in good health.

"How old are you, Mr. Morgan?" was the next question.

"I'm 69 years old."

"We assume you're going back to your office."

"Well, you may assume it if you want to. I'll probably be doing the usual things."

"I thought you might want to say something about Mr. Roosevelts' election," a newsman said.

"DON'T THINK"

"What do you think about Wallie Simpson being the next queen of England," somebody asked.

"I don't think."

"Would you like to see the budget balanced?"

"Would you?"

He was asked whether he believed the business improvement in England would continue.

"I think so," he said. "They're getting along pretty well over there."

To a question whether he had noticed less fear of war in Europe this year than last, Morgan said:

HARD TO TELL

"I don't know about that. It's awfully hard to tell. It's very dark and cloudy."

He was asked whether he had any statement to volunteer.

"You never get into trouble until you volunteer statements," he replied.

"Wel, Mr. Morgan, you're making it pretty tough for us to write a story," a reporter said.

"That's exactly my intention," he said.

Clara Bow Wants Another Baby Soon

Hollywood, Nov. 17 (INS)—Clara Bow hopes to have another child "very soon" she announced today in indignantly denying a rumor she and Rex Bell, her cowboy actor husband, were estranged.

"I'm very much in love, more so now than ever before," said the flaming-haired "It" girl of the silent films. "It is a very silly rumor."

CAR INSURANCE FIRMS LOSE IN RATE FIGHT

A petition for a temporary injunction to restrain the state from placing in effect the 1937 compulsory automobile insurance rates was denied today in the Supreme Judicial Court by Justice John C. Crosby.

A master's hearing on the question of reviewing the rates is scheduled to open tomorrow.

The injunction was sought by 43 insurance companies against the rate reduction ordered in September by Insurance Commissioner Francis DeCelles.

Contention of the insurance companies was that they would lose money if the reduction—2 per cent less than the 1936 schedule—went into effect.

Counsel for the petitioners is Judge Frederick H. Chase.

Review of the case will begin tomorrow before William Harold Hitchcock, secretary of the Massachusetts bar examiners, as a master in the Supreme Judicial court.

Two hundred thousand applications for the compulsory auto insurance have already been received, and the granting of an injunction would have resulted in great confusion.

Deny Speeding Wallis' Divorce; King Said to Favor Delay

MONARCH AIMS TO BE OFTEN IN COMPANY

By DAVID P. SENTNER

(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service)

London, Nov. 17—Reports current in London that efforts are being made to expedite the final divorce decree of Mrs. Wallis Simpson were denied today by a close friend of the attractive Baltimore matron.

The case, it was learned, will take its normal course, with the justice of the central division of the London law courts handing down a final decree on a Monday when the necessary six month period since granting of her decree nisi has elapsed.

Eyes of the world will then turn to King Edward's Buckingham palace to see what will follow.

KING WELCOMES DELAY

Reports that steps were being taken to hasten the final decree were coupled with the theory that opposition to King Edward's marriage to Mrs. Simpson was causing the situation to come to a head at a time when the monarch is unable to present his side of the case.

Friends state, however, that the King welcomes the additional five months remaining before the divorce becomes final, as he feels this will give the public ample time to learn of his feelings. He is confident opinion will crystalize favorably.

The fact he intends to be seen frequently in Mrs. Simpson's company is expected to educate the public regarding his true sentiments. Many believe his great popularity will serve to overcome any opposition from ultra-conservatives.

The King plans to continue his intense schedule of public appearances, thus demonstrating his royal duties remain unaffected by his private romance.

"WALLY" NOT ANXIOUS

A highly-placed member of the court circle suggested today that current reports strong opposition has caused the King to abandon his marriage plans actually are father to the thought.

In connection with the reports the divorce might be expedited, it was ascertained such a step would be warranted only by most unusual circumstances. It would be contrary to the desire evidenced by Mrs. Simpson herself, who has observed all the routine divorce formalities, even to the extent of taking the witness stand in Ipswich court when she possibly might have pleaded illness and submitted a deposition.

The procedure governing the granting of absolute divorces is as follows:

The official who keeps check on decrees nisi prepares a London list near the end of the six months' period. The public will first learn when the case of Simpson vs. Simpson appears on the "cause" list by publication of an identifying number, along with numerous others.

Final decrees are always issued on a Monday. The cases are handled in large batches by the judge, who cites each only by a number. He waits three minutes and if no objections are voiced, he says:

"I pronounce that decrees nisi number — to — are absolute."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Simpson and her aunt, Mrs. D. B. Merryman of Washington, D. C., who accompanied her to the King's Fort Belvedere house party returned to London and went immediately to Mrs. Simpson's Cumberland terrace apartment.

There, Mrs. Simpson found another of the beautiful boxes of flowers which the King has sent her almost daily.

Some members of the Church and Tory groups in London which have been opposed to the prospective marriage of King Edward and Mrs. Simpson continue to insist they have reason to believe the marriage will not take place.

With regard to rumors of friction between the King and the Archbishop of Canterbury over the royal romance, a high cleric of the Church of England told Universal Service:

"Contrary to reports, there is no sharpness between the King and the Archbishop. Both understand each other's position."

Royalty Also May Hold Hands

Are they holding hands? Say yes or no, as you like, but it looks like a little finger hold. Here the camera seemingly caught the hands of King Edward and Mrs. "Wally" Simpson clasped as the couple strolled. This fine picture of King Edward and the woman he may marry was made on the Continental vacation earlier this year. Mrs. Simpson was in the vacation party for some time.

In today's classified columns there is a choice selection of rooms that will meet all your requirements as to price, location, and description.

Entombed Miners Found Dead

Superior, Mont., Nov. 17 (AP)—The bodies of Antone Gustafson, 40, and Oscar Gervart, 45, gold miners buried in a slide at the Windfall placer mine near here Saturday night, were brought from their mountain tomb today.

Rescuers had fought their way through the muck of of a tunnel at the gold mine with only a narrow wall of mud and rocks separating them from the men.

It had been hoped at least one of the men would be found alive, but both were dead.

5 Attack Driver In Market Strike

Violence flared briefly in the market district today when five men, alleged to be striking truck drivers, attacked another driver in front of Chamberlain's market.

Sergeant James Lewis and two patrolmen in a cruising car hurried to the scene and foud the driver struggling with five men. The attackers fled as police arrived.

Seek Other Man

Holliston, Nov. 17—Police here today sought an unidentified man allegedly seen in the company of Mrs. Alice Bard, mystery death victim, on the day before she met her tragic end.

CAPTAIN BEST UNDER ARREST IN NEW YORK

Captain Leonard Best, of Gloucester, British officer in the World War, and lecturer on Ethiopia before many exclusive clubs in the United States in recent months, was arrested today in New York.

Captain Best is charged, in a warrant issued late yesterday in Gloucester District Court, with embezzlement of $6226, from funds of a travel agency, of which he was manager.

The arrest took place at the Roosevelt Hotel in New York City after authorities learned he had booked passage with his wife and two children for England.

WITH LAWRENCE

Captain Best was one of the most highly honored citizens of Gloucester. Having served with Lawrence in Arabia, he had many colorful experiences to relate, and he was always on reception committees to notable visitors.

Wherever he appeared at public functions, including his own lectures, he wore his army uniform and medals.

He had been in Gloucester with his family since 1934. He was manager of the travel agency of W. G. Brown's department store, having had experience abroad in the same line of business.

Frequently he took trips lasting from one to two weeks to deliver his lectures, which, according to some reports, were financed in part by the British government. He had made an inspection tour in Ethiopia and was personally familiar with the conditions the Italian troops met with in their invasion.

WARRANT SWORN OUT

The warrant was sworn out by William G. Brown, Jr., an executive of the department store.

According to Brown, Captain Best said he had sold a round-the-world tour to a couple with two servants.

In order to get tickets and travel checks for the party at one of the big Boston travel agencies, he allegedly asked for an advance from Brown.

Brown supplied a check and Captain Best made a trip to Boston, returning to say that the tickets and travel checks were to be sent.

TOUR ARRANGED

Captain Best then, according to Brown, said he had a week's lecture tour all arranged and he gave his schedule. He departed with his family Saturday.

After serving with Lawrence in Arabia, as the famous youth's motor officer, in the World War, Capt. Best was a magistrate in India, later making his Ethiopian inspection for the British government.

He managed several round-the-world tours for a large agency abroad and then came to the United States in 1932, working two years in New York before going to Gloucester.

HAWAII FOOD SUPPLY HIT BY SHIP STRIKE

Honolulu, Nov. 17 (AP)—A serious shortage in Hawaii was predicted by business men here today unless the maritime strike is settled soon. The territory imports about 80 per cent of its food.

With prices rising steadily, business leaders estimated a crisis will develop in the next ten days when warehouse supplies of eggs, fresh vegetables and potatoes will be nearly exhausted.

Ship Owners on Coast Hold New Strike Parley

San Francisco, Nov. 17 (INS)—Hope for peace in the Pacific Coast shipping strike brightened today more than it has in the past three weeks.

The reason for the ray of hope was another scheduled meeting today between Thomas G. Plant, spokesman for the coast committee of ship owners and representatives of unlicensed ship personnel—sailors, stewards and cooks, and marine firemen, water tenders and oilers.

Mayor Awaits Reply On Ship Arbitration Plea

Washington, Nov. 17 (INS)—As the maritime strike entered its fourth week of deadlock, mayors of coastal cities today anxiously awaited replies to their request that shipowners and unions submit their differences to arbitration boards.

Following their conferences with the President and Secretary of Labor Perkins in an effort to start peace negotiations, Mayors Angelo Rossi of San Francisco and Fiorello La Guardia of New York rested their case with the shipowners and unions for the time being.

Strikers Seek to Halt Sailing of Big U. S. Liner

New York, Nov. 17 (INS)—Discouraged by failure of negotiations, maritime strikers here today made plans to prevent sailing of the United States liner Washington tomorrow, while forces opposing the outlaw strike claimed added strength.

Strike leaders believe that if they succeed in preventing the Washington's departure for Europe their victory is won.

Divorce Planned By Errol Flynns

Romance
Goes On Rocks

Lili Damita

LILI DAMITA, ACTOR, PART

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service.

Hollywood, Nov. 17 (US)—The Errol Flynn-Lili Damita marriage has gone on the rocks. For months rumors have been afloat in Hollywood that the matrimonial barque of Errol and Lili was having rough sailing, but to the outside world they denied there had been any serious trouble.

However, Errol was reported as having moved out of his Hollywood hilltop home and to be staying with a writer friend, William Ullman, preparatory to moving into a fashionable apartment hotel.

The final separation came Saturday night when Lili followed her husband to a local cafe, where he was dining with a party of friends and left shortly afterward in tears.

Neither Flynn nor Miss Damita would make any comment on their separation, but word of an impending divorce came from a representative of the actor, who said court action would probably be filed by Miss Damita today or tomorrow.

Flynn's much publicized trip to Borneo, the South Seas and England is definitely called off for the reason that he will remain here on account of domestic trouble. He will content himself with a few weeks' holiday.

Errol Flynn

No newcomer in Hollywood has ever had a more colorful or adventurous career than this young Irishman who made such a sensational success in his first picture, "Captain Blood," and later in "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

Having been a pearl fisherman in the South Seas, a gold miner in Africa and an explorer in odd corners of the globe, Flynn brought a new type of adventurous hero to the screen, and one that found instant favor with the fans.

He was really a successor to Douglas Fairbanks in the swashbuckling roles that no one else had seemed to be able to fill after Fairbanks' retirement.

ROOSEVELT ON WAY SOUTH TONIGHT

By PHILIP PEARL

Washington, Nov. 17 (US)—Hopeful of being able to promote the "peace of the world" at the Pan-American conference, President Roosevelt announced definitely he will sail tomorrow morning for Buenos Aires.

He will leave tonight by train for Charlestown, S. C., where he will embark on the cruiser Indianapolis for the 12,000-mile voyage to the Argentine capital and back.

He will also pay brief visits to Rio De Janeiro and Montevideo, capitals of Brazil and Uruguay.

The President will arrive at Buenos Aires Dec. 1 to attend the opening of the Inter-American peace conference and deliver a speech calling upon the nations of the western hemisphere to set an example for the preservation of peace to the rest of the world. He said he expects to return to this country December 14.

HANDS OFF STRIKE

In preparation for his departure, the President held a final cabinet meeting and also received a large delegation of mayors, here to attend the annual meeting of the United States conference of mayors.

While anxious to bring about settlement of the nationwide maritime strike before he goes, the President explained to the mayors:

"This ship strike could go on for a week. It might go on for two weeks, or longer.

"As between this particular strike and whatever effect my visit to South America may have on the peace of the world, the peace of the world is the more important of the two.

"I hope the ship owners and the men out on strike will recognize that fact and come together."

November 18—Leave Charleston at 8 a. m. aboard U. S. S. Indianapolis.

November 21—Arrive at Trinidad and spend several hours in port while refueling. The President will not go ashore.

November 27—Arrive Rio De Janeiro and spend day ashore as guest of the President and government of Brazil.

November 31—Arrive in the Argentine.

December 1—Arrive at Buenos Aires to make opening address at Pan-American conference.

December 2—Leave Buenos Aires on return trip.

December 5—Arrive Montevideo and leave that afternoon.

On his way north from Montevideo, the President will go directly to the United States except for another refueling at Trinidad. He will either return to Charleston or at some Florida port.

FLORIDA CANAL OK'D BY BOARD

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—The War Department announced today a special board of army engineers studying the Florida ship canal reported the project "Is justified in the public interest."

The department called a public hearing here on the report on December 16 before the board of engineers for rivers and harbors.

The announcement said the report, dated November 1, 1936, had this to say of the controversial project:

"Construction of a sea level canal to provide a minimum depth of 33 feet and a minimum width of 250 feet, at an estimated cost of $157,585,000, exclusive of lands, in addition to $5,400,000 already expended, is justified in the public interest."

16,000,000 Can't Be Wrong

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Vermont and Maine are still two of the most original of the thirteen colonies. If they were only farther apart you could use them for bookends.

But we don't understand how anybody can say the Republican party is washed up with sixteen million votes. What we need is a strong minority, as grandma said when she fed the baby garlic.

Sixteen million is a lot of anything. No other nation but America can allow that many people to guess wrong and still be right.

P. S.—They made a nice tassel out of the lunatic fringe.

"ARMY'S MOTHER" DANGEROUSLY ILL

SCHUMANN-HEINK AT HOME

The noted contralto, 75, her last birthday, is suffering at her Hollywood home from a blood ailment. It recurred Saturday with hemorrhages of the throat and lungs. Immediate transfusions were necessary, Dr. Samuel Alter said, to save her life.

"Her condition is still serious and we are watching her carefully," the physician added. "She has rallied since the transfusions."

A similar attack occurred when the beloved singer returned from a summer vacation in Wisconsin. After two blood transfusions, she seemed to be on the way to recovery.

Madame Schumann-Heink's delicate health this fall delayed the start of a motion picture starring career, by which she had hoped to "make people laugh and be happy."

LIFE STARTS AT 75

As she cut a cake with 75 candles on it last June 15, surrounded by children and grandchildren, she gayly predicted "now it seems my life is just beginning."

One of her last public appearances as a singer was at the San Diego Exposition on July 21, 1935, designated as Schumann-Heink day. She sang "The Star Spangled Banner" to thousands.

At 17, this daughter of an Austrian army officer became the principal contralto of the Dresden court opera. Her first role was Azucena in "Il Trovatore."

Her success was assured.

Berlin, Bayreuth and the Metropolitan in New York heard her voice. She toured widely. She was married three times.

In the World War, she mothered "my soldier boys"—millions of them—as if they had been her own sons. She took it as a personal compliment that the federal government should select June 15, her birthday, to deliver the bonus checks last summer.

SCORED MOVIE HIT

In 1935, her long career virtually at an end, the beloved grand dame took a small bit as a singing instructor in a Pickford-Lasky movie, "Here's to Romance."

Nino Martini was the star. But it was Madame Schumann-Heink who created the sensation when the picture was released. Producer Jesse L. Lasky and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio engaged in a controversy over her future services.

"It is very comic," she said at that time, "this quarreling among the motion picture men who call me terrific, colossal, and gigantic. Gigantic? I don't think I like that word very much."

She said it was a "great shock" when she saw her image on the screen.

"I didn't know I was so homely."

LOST 2 SONS IN WAR

"But I am sure I could play comedy, if they would let me, for I think I have suffered a little."

MADAME SCHUMANN-HEINK

Two sons died in the World War. She is a widow.

Out of her experiences, she said she gained a serenity, an ability to make others happy, adding:

"I have so much sunshine to give. I know I can make people laugh and be happy. I pray the good God to give me four or five more years—it is long enough to do a little bit of good, anyway."

Foresters Meet At Westminster

Plans for activities of the coming year will be made tonight by Boston district deputies of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, meeting at the Hotel Westminster.

More than 100 local courts will be represented. The meeting will be in charge of William J. Harrison, Jr., of Roxbury, high outside sentinel of the order.

Foreign War Vets Install Tonight

The U. S. S. Constitution Post No. 3339 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars will install the new officers for the coming year at a reception tonight at the Westminster Hotel.

James Lynch will succeed James McGarry as captain of the All-Navy Post, while Mrs. Helen P. McGarry was re-elected president of the Women's Auxiliary.

RACE DOPING "INVITATION" PROBE ON

Assistant United States Attorney William T. McCarthy today indicated the probe before a Federal Grand Jury of alleged doping of dogs and horses at Massachusetts race tracks would be an "invitation affair."

McCarthy made the announcement when he declared that the scheduled investigation before the Grand Jury today had been postponed until tomorrow.

At the same time he declared that no witnesses would be subpoenaed to appear before the grand jury. He added to this surprising announcement:

"The only two witnesses we are going to invite are Chairman of the State Racing Commission Charles F. Connors and another member of the commission, William H. Ensign.

"Their invitations are being sent out today."

At present G-men are seeking three important witnesses who have disappeared in connection with the alleged doping of a horse, Sky Lad, at the Suffolk Downs race track on August 8.

It had been previously believed that all members of the State Racing Commission would be called before the federal grand jury to tell what they know of a reported secret investigation, made without consulting Attorney-General Paul A. Dever.

Pneumonia Strikes Siamese Twin, Brother Well

New York, Nov. 17 (INS)—Offered a rare opportunity to study the effect of disease on one Siamese twin when the other is stricken, physicians today hovered over the bed in a New York hospital of the Godino boys, who have been joined together since their birth 28 years ago.

Linked by muscular tissue at the base of their spines, they are lying on their sides, back to back—Lucio suffering with pneumonia and running a temperature of 105 degrees, Simplicio with a normal temperature.

Physicians at the hospital said they did not believe there was a risk of the wealthy twin catching pneumonia from his brother.

Although they share the usual narrow hospital bed, their faces are turned away from each other.

The twins were cheered by a visit from their wives, the Filipino sisters they married in Manila in 1929. The twins and their wives returned to New York about two weeks ago from a theatrical engagement in Greenville, N. C., and Lucio developed a chill upon arrival here. This turned to pneumonia, affecting his left lung.

4 AUTO DEATHS, 5 INJURED 2 DYING

Four persons met death in auto crashes today, including three in Greater Boston, to record the 201st, 202d and 203d time death has taken the wheel in this section since January 1.

Five others were injured, two of them dying, as a result of crashes in Walpole and Quincy.

The dead:

GIOVANNI GIOLINI, 61, of Myrtle street, Everett, struck at Louis street and Revere Beach parkway by a hit-and-run driver in an allegedly stolen car.

MRS. LILLIAN SMITH, 60, of Pine Grove avenue, Newton Lower Falls, struck while crossing Waltham street near West Newton square.

FRANK VENTOLA of Norton avenue, Medford, burned to death when the truck which he was driving collided with another truck in Walpole.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN, about 55, was killed by a street car at Dorchester avenue and Mercer street, South Boston.

AUTOS HAVE KILLED
IN GREATER BOSTON THIS YEAR

They were Vincent Martin, 21, of Myrtle street, Rockland, who police said was the driver of the car; James F. McKenna, 21, of Cliff street, Rockland, both suffering concussion of the brain, and Miss Anna Mahoney, 21, of Emerald street, South End, who suffered injuries to both legs and lacerations of the body.

All three were riding in the car which overturned. Andrew L. Wils of Randolph street, Canton, alleged driver of the truck, was uninjured. The others were taken to City Hospital in the police ambulance of the Warren avenue station.

Newton police said the machine which struck and killed Mrs. Smith was allegedly operated by Robert L. Quigley, 21, of Hillside avenue, West Newton.

Dying as a result of the truck collision on the Boston-Providence highway in Walpole was the driver of the second truck, Allen Cool[illegible] of Frank street, Providence, [illegible]

He was thrown clear of the flames but was [illegible] that he was reported dying today in Norw[illegible].

One of the trucks in the crash was loaded with linoleum and and waste. The other carried a load of sugar.

Would-be rescuers risked their lives trying vainly to reach Ventola. State police from Foxboro barracks took charge.

In Quincy, 80-year-old Mrs. Rose Canavan of School street was not expected today to recover from injuries she received when she was knocked down on School street near St. John's church by a hit-and-run autoist.

Thrill at 2

Manila, P. I., Nov. 17 (AP)—Two-year-old Joan Silen became the youngest person to fly across the Pacific Ocean when the Hawaii Clipper landed on Manila Bay today.

Joan said the trip was "fine." She accompanied her mother, Mrs. Bert Silen of Manila, on the flight from Alameda, Calif.

Beauty's Death Dress Sought by Gen. Denhardt

La Grange, Ky., Nov. 17 (AP)—Counsel for Brigadier General Henry D. Denhardt, accused of killing Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor, announced they would apply today in county court at New Castle for an order directing the prosecution to turn over to them for examination the widow's clothing, a full report of the autopsy and other exhibits.

John Marshall Berry of defense counsel said the application was being drafted for filing with County Judge A. S. Morgan, before whom General Denhardt will be given an examining trial Friday on a murder charge.

3 MEET DEATH ON FREIGHTER

Marine Corporation picked up both radio dispatches. How many ships in the vicinity of the Tweedbank heard the calls and started the life-and-death race to the floundering freighter is as yet unknown.

The first message, received at 7:29 a. m., Boston time, told the marine world that heavy seas had swept the two seamen to their deaths and asked all ships within receiving range to "keep a sharp lookout."

The second, picked up at 8:38, was:

"Heavy gale. Captain killed. Radio operator marooned in radio room and cannot get to bridge. Heavy seas. S. S. Tweedbank reporting in position 37:00 north (longitude) and 59:30 west (latitude)."

DUE HERE TOMORROW

The Tweedbank, owned by the Bank Line, Ltd., of Belfast, Ireland, was due here tomorrow at the Army Base with a cargo of rubber.

She was en route from the Far East and the Straits Settlements. Her agents in Boston are Patterson-Wylde & Co.

The last time she docked in Boston was on May 18, according to Thomas H. MacGregor of the ship brokerage firm of John G. Hall & Co.

MacGregor, a close friend of the dead captain, had the sad duty of cabling to London to inform Mrs. MacKenzie she is a widow.

He said that most of the Tweedbank's crew are Malays or Negroes and that only the officers are English.

From her last report, the helpless ship was approximately 700 miles northeast of Bermuda and about the same distance east of [illegible] winte[illegible] area.

The Tweedbank is one of the latest type motorships, 426 feet long, 5627 tons and built with one steel deck.

She had last called at St. Vincent, Cape Verde Islands. That accounted for her eastern position.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 17 (AP)—The British steamer Sheaf Spear, about 600 miles due east of Cape Hatteras, signalled early today that its engine room is leaking badly and asked vessels in the vicinity to stand by.

175 awards		$10,000.00

3. The contest is open to any bona fide resident of New England except employes of the Boston American, theatres and motion picture companies listed in this contest, and their families. It costs nothing to play this game. No Entry Fees. No Subscriptions to Get. No Money to Pay.

4. Below each picture must be written or printed the title of the motion picture and the names of three players appearing in it selected from the list of names printed with each cartoon.

5. In all 72 cartoons will be printed—one each publication day for 12 weeks. Cartoons are to be submitted only in complete groups of 72. Hold them until you have the 72. Then send or bring them to Movie Title & Identity Editor, Boston American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., P. O. Box 1099. Be sure to write your name and address clearly on your entry. All entries must be in Boston American office by midnight, Wednesday, January 27, or postmarked not later than January 27, midnight. It is understood that all entries in this test are to become the property of the Boston Evening American. No entries will be returned. Each entry must be accompanied by some appropriate slogan of not more than ten words suitable for publicizing the moving picture industry. For example: "Movies, the Nation's Favorite Recreation" or "Movies, they amuse and educate." Only ONE slogan can be submitted with each complete entry of 72 cartoons. A special blank, on which your slogan may be written, will appear with the last cartoon in the set, number 72.

6. Each entry should be sent by first class mail—postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the post office department. Contestants may send in as many sets as they wish but no contestant shall be entitled to more than one prize and not more than one prize will be awarded in a family.

7. Accuracy will count. Neatness will count. No elaborate sets are necessary. Simplicity is best.

8. You need not purchase the Boston American to compete. You may copy or trace the cartoons from the originals in the Boston American and assemble the set of pictures from the copies you have made. Copies of the Boston American may be examined at Boston American offices or public libraries free of charge.

9. The judges will be a committee appointed by the Boston American. Their decision will be final. In the event of a tie by two or more contestants for any position in the list of winners, the prize or prizes next in order will be combined in a lump sum and then evenly distributed among those tying.

The entry of a participant is an acknowledgment and complete acceptance of all rules governing this test, made now or at any time at the discretion of the judges.

The above M and P theatres mentioned here will carry on their screens scenes and titles of forthcoming productions which will be used in this contest.

Trailing Kidnaper Of Mrs. Stoll

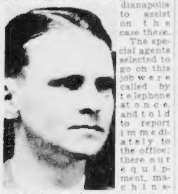
By Melvin Purvis

CHAPTER XXXI

There seemed to be never a dull moment in the service of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

About midnight on Saturday, October 13, 1934, I received a telephone call from the Director in Washington informing me that Robinson, who had kidnaped Mrs. Alice Stoll in Louisville on the preceding Wednesday, was in Indianapolis and had been placing telephone calls to the family of the victim in Louisville and to his own family in Nashville, Tennessee.

The director desired that I take seven men from Chicago to Indianapolis to assist on the case there.



Melvin Purvis

The special agents selected to go on this job were called by telephone at once, and told to report immediately to the office; there our equipment, machine-guns, search-lights, bullet-proof vests, etc., was selected; a plane was chartered to take us to Indianapolis, and we arrived there before dawn on Sunday, Oct. 14.

In Indianapolis we received the background of the case. From past experience we knew that we were in for a long siege; we rented a sufficient number of automobiles and purchased several cots so that we could sleep in the office whenever possible. The kidnaper had been making telephone calls from pay-stations, giving directions as to the manner in which the ransom money of $50,000, which he had demanded, was to be paid.

A special wire was placed in our office direct from the telephone company office and monitors were placed on the wires. Thereafter we received reports on every telephone call made by Robinson to Louisville or Nashville, being informed immediately of the addresses from which his calls were being made, but we never could get to those points before Robinson had left.

There were some 20,000 pay-stations in the city of Indianapolis, making it impossible to cover all of them, and so we had to satisfy ourselves with covering drug stores and the Union Station and other points where Robinson had made previous calls.

This was fruitless because he never called from the same station twice. It was maddening to know that this kidnaper was making telephone calls right under our noses, so to speak, and that we could do nothing about it.

Safety Sought

In all kidnaping cases it is primarily the desire of the Department of Justice to bring about the safe release of the victim. We have always been willing to take ourselves entirely out of a case until the victim has been safely returned.

The intervening time is utilized in studying the kidnaper, his habits, his previous record, and in making preparation for fast work once the victim is released.

Finally, the ransom money which was sent by express by the Stoll family to the father of Robinson in Nashville, was delivered by the father to the kidnaper's wife, Mrs. Frances Robinson, in accordance with the kidnaper's instructions. On Tuesday, October 16, Mrs. Robinson left Nashville for a nearby point in Tennessee where she entraind for Terre Haute, Indiana, from which point she was to travel to Indianapolis.

Our men were placed on the train with Mrs. Robinson and were to trail her in an endeavor to determine where the kidnaper might be hiding and where the ransom money might be delivered to him. I left Indianapolis with eight men in automobiles to pick up the trail in Terre Haute.

Around midnight, on October 16, we saw Mrs. Robinson get off the train at Terre Haute. The men who had been trailing her pointed her out to us and were told to drop the trail to avoid recognition.

Mrs. Robinson went into a cafe in the station and had a cup of coffee; then came out, the bag loaded with fifty thousand dollars of ransom money in her hand, and got into a taxi. Another special agent and I jumped into our car and followed the circuitous route through alleys and side streets which she apparently had instructed the taxi driver to take in transferring from one station to another.

A Special Agent sat in an automobile near the entrance to the station; Mrs. Robinson came out carrying her little bag of money and came up to his car. She held a conversation with him while she was standing on the street; he told her he was a taxi driver and would be glad to take her anywhere.

She got into the front seat of the car with him, seemed hysterical, and told him that she knew that Government men and police were all around the place watching her and that she could tell that she was being followed.

She was in a very hysterical condition and apparently did not know what to do next; she seemed to doubt that the special agent was a taxi-driver and put him to a test. She asked him the name of the street at the next corner, and by some strange coincidence he knew it and told her what it was. Mrs. Robinson got out of the car and walked down to the corner and looked up at the sign.

He was right. Coming back to the car she asked him the name of the street at the opposite end of the block. He knew that, too, and she proved it in the same fashion. But evidently she decided against hiring him and went back to the station, apparently in a highly nervous state.

After learning of this conversation from the special agent, I came to the conclusion that if Mrs. Robinson were taken into custody immediately and questioned, she would undoubtedly break and tell us where Robinson was holding Mrs. Stoll and where she was to meet him to give him the ransom money.

It was my belief that with this knowledge we could watch the place where Robinson was holding Mrs. Stoll until he left to meet Mrs. Robinson, then we might enter the house, rescue the victim, lay in wait until the kidnaper returned and capture him.

Plan Rejected

I rushed to a pay station in a nearby hotel and called Louisville and made this suggestion almost in a pleading voice. My answer was, "It might be a good idea, but you have your instructions; follow them."

And so we dropped the trail of Indianapolis to try to take it up again there. She did not travel by train but took a taxi-cab all the way from Terre Haute to Indianapolis, paying the driver about thirty-five dollars.

All along the way on our return trip to Indianapolis we picked up ransom bills which had been distributed along the route by Mrs. Robinson in paying for gasoline.

That morning in Indianapolis was a frantic one. Hotels were being covered, taxi drivers were being questioned, and every possible lead followed, but we didn't pick up Mrs. Robinson's trail again.

That afternoon, Wednesday, Oct. 17, we received information that a telephone call had been made from a residence in Indianapolis to Louisville indicating that Mrs. Stoll had been released by the kidnaper and was ready to start for home.

We did not know who lived in this house but we knew the address and rushed there immediately. We later learned that it was the home of Rev. E. Arnold Clegg, pastor of the Capitol M. E. Church of Indianapolis, who was a relative of Mrs. Stoll.

Upon arrival at this address and having no previous information as to who or what it might contain, special agents were placed at points where an observation could be maintained.

I went to a telephone and upon my return, a special agent informed me that a car, the license number of which he had obtained, had just driven away from the house. It was driven by a man with dark hair, and there were three women in the back seat, one of which the special agent thought might possibly be Mrs. Stoll.

Thomas H. Robinson, Jr.

Mrs. Alice Stoll

Then began the chase; one of the cars, a rented one, broke down and the men in it piled into the car with us.

We did not desire to stop this car in the center of a town, and by this time it was getting dark. We also did not desire to stop the car in a very dark place for obvious reasons. Finally an opportunity came; we drove up alongside of it and ordered the driver to stop the car on the side of the road.

We jumped out, ran over and opened the back door of the car. One of the women was Mrs. Stoll and on one side of her was Mrs. Robinson, the kidnaper's wife. It was then that we learned that the driver was Rev. Clegg and that the other woman with Mrs. Stoll was Mrs. Clegg, the minister's wife.

Mrs. Robinson, the kidnaper's wife, became apparently very hysterical and stated that she had nothing to do with the kidnaping and nothing to do with anything except to follow the instructions in an effort to help Mrs. Stoll.

We decided in view of the confusion that the best thing to do would be to get Mrs. Stoll home as quickly as possible and send Mrs. Robinson to a hospital. I rode in the front seat with Rev. Clegg and the three women were in the back seat, Mrs. Robinson still maintaining her highly hysterical attitude.

En route to Louisville, driving slowly with the other Special Agents following in their cars, I prevailed upon Mrs. Stoll to change cars. She was placed in a car with another Special Agent and me.

Mrs. Robinson was placed in another automobile with other Special Agents who were instructed to take her to a hospital in Louisville and to endeavor to obtain from her the address of the hide-out in Indianapolis and any other facts which could be obtained.

MOTHER SEEKS TO FREE BUCK, KIDNAPER

Mrs. Bertha Buck, 59-year-old mother of the man who is serving a 25-year state prison sentence for the kidnaping of "Peggy" McMath at Harwichport in 1933, appeared at the State House today.

Crippled with rheumatism and infirm beyond her years, the white-haired woman told Assistant Executive Secretary John H. Backus that she wanted to see the governor to plead for her son's parole.

ASKS RELAY OF PLEA

When Backus told her the governor was ill at home, she made her tearful plea to him and asked that he relay it to Governor Curley.

"Why shouldn't my Kenneth be free?" she asked. Backus was sympathetic, but silent. She went on:

"He never, never did do that kidnaping. He told me so. He told me the crime was committed by another man entirely.

"He was my youngest boy and he was always a good boy.

"When his father died 16 years ago, I had to take in washing to rear my family and although Kenneth was only 15 he went out and got a job as a plumber's helper.

HELPED MOTHER

"Every Saturday night he would turn over his pay to me. And every other night he would help me with the housework.

"He wasn't like a lot of boys. He wasn't afraid to wash the dishes or scrub the floors or chop wood for me.

"I need him now. Please tell the governor that I pray every day that my boy will be released."

Mrs. Buck's appeal follows a letter she sent to Governor Curley a short time ago after Buck himself had asked for parole.

The governor has studied the evidence in the McMath case and the matter is believed to be in the hands of the advisory board on paroles.

Pope Talks Films With Will Hays

Vatican City, Nov. 17 (AP)—Pope Pius today received Will H. Hays, American movie co-ordinator, in a half-hour audience discussing motion pictures.

Hays described the interview as the "apex" of his 15 years as film supervisor.

He said he found himself in accord with the aged pontiff's views on the morals of modern movies and was "greatly impressed with the freshness and energy" shown by the Pope.

Edwards Evades WPA Demand

"Go and see Congress," was State Works Progress Administrator Paul Edwards' reply today to the demand of seven WPA workers for a 30-hour week, a 20 per cent wage increase and sick and vacation leaves.

The workers, claiming to represent a union of workers on the WPA writers' and artists' projects, also demanded "adequate notice of dismissal."

Ex-Mrs. Vallee Critically Ill

FAY WEBB

Santa Monica, Cal., Nov. 17 (US)—Fay Webb, former wife of Rudy Vallee, was reported in a critical condition today. She was operated on last Friday for an internal ailment and has been in ill health for several years. Miss Webb was reported recovering from the operation, but last night suffered a relapse.

3500 GET PAY BOOST IN R. I.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 17 (AP)—Wage boosts for 3500 more Rhode Island textile and rubber workers were announced today by five firms, but a strike of about 100 workers in the U. S. Rubber Co. plant followed the announcement.

Some of the employes protested that the increase was less than was given in other plants of the same firm.

Pay boosts approximating 10 per cent were announced for 500 workers of the H. & H. Manufacturing Co. and the Quidnick Dye Works, both in Coventry; raises of an undetermined amount were announced for 300 employes of te Greenwich Bleachery, and 700 in the Apponaug Co. mill in Warwick.

3 AUDITIONING NIGHTS FOR AMATEURS

Final three nights of auditioning are at hand, this evening, tomorrow and Thursday will find the closing sessions of the quest for striking amateur talent by the Haym Solomon Lodge of B'nai B'rith, with hearings to be held as they have been heretofore at the Hotel Bradford.

The time is 8 o'clock on each of the three nights this week, and the room number is being designated on the bulletin board in the hotel lobby.

It's the search for artists to take part in the gala stage show and entertainment being held by the B'nai B'rith on November 25, with the winning entrants to be sent to New York to take auditions with the one and only Fred Allen of "Town Hall Tonight" radio fame. All expenses will be paid.

Unusual response has attended the auditions to date and some splendid instrumental, vocal and impersonation entries are recorded for the finals, scheduled to take place at radio station WMEX, Brookline avenue, Boston. These finals are to hold forth on Friday night, Nov. 20, with Ann Marsters, Boston American feature writer; William Pote, WMEX executive; George Holland, the "Boston After Dark" columnist, and "N. F. T." acting as judges of the final group.

Mrs. Belle Friedman of the Haym Solomon Lodge Auxiliary committee, reports arrangements fast being made ready and an exceptional stage production called "Clown Hall Tonight" to be presented in the Hotel Bradford main ballroom on the night of Nov. 25, inaddition to the gala entertainment and reception.

CORPORATE TAX REVISION UP

Washington, Nov. 17 (INS)—Revision of the controversial corporate surplus tax law will be considered by the 75th Congress, Chairman Doughton (D) of North Carolina of the House Ways and Means Committee predicted today.

After conferring with congressional experts, Doughton said that he hoped that Congress can repeal some of the "nuisance" and miscellaneous sales taxes now on the statute books.

While frequent conferences will be held on the tax situation, Doughton said that the Ways and Means Committee probably will not open hearings on tax legislation until after Congress meets.

Repeal or revision of the corporate surplus law affecting this year's returns of corporations probably would be difficult in view of the delay in the sessions of the committee, since tax returns will be made on March 15 of next year.

Phone Girl Wins $25 Award for News Tip

By THE NEWSTIP EDITOR

Captain John W. Staples of the Auburn, Me., police department committed suicide.

A telephone operator, one of the few first to learn the tragic news, notified the Boston Evening American and enabled this newspaper to be first on the street with the complete story.

She is awarded the first prize of $25 in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser weekly newstip contest.

Second prize of $10 was split between a Wilmington stenographer, awarded one-half for tip on fatal train wreck, and an East Holliston laborer for the first tip on a murder in Holliston. Both will receive $5.

A Boston housekeeper won the third prize of $5 for tip on the birth of twins—the first set to be born Friday the 13th.

The following received $1 tip awards:

A Malden agent for tip on shooting; a North Wilmington housewife for tip on accident; a Barrington, R. I., man for tip on fatal auto crash; a Brockton clerk for tip on a traffic tie-up; a Hyannis bookkeeper for tip on a feature story; a West End man for tip on machine crash; a Brighton salesman for tip on another car crash; a Harvard student for tip on fire; a Boston resident for tip on illness of a prominent person; and a Needham resident for tip on a fatal accident.

Every week the Newstip Editor awards $50.00 in prizes for news tips. When you HEAR or SEE NEWS just telephone LIBERTY 4000 and ask for the NEWSTIP EDITOR. We do the rest.

WHY PUT UP WITH PIMPLES, WRINKLES AND A SALLOW SKIN?
So many women throw their charm and beauty away — look years older than they are—because they neglect common constipation. They forget that badly balanced meals, over a period of years, can change how they look and feel.
Often their menus lack the "bulk" needed for regular habits. Then constipation, the beauty-killer, sets in. Other effects may be headaches, listlessness, sleeplessness.
Get "bulk" back into your meals with a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. It absorbs moisture within the body, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system.
Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily, either as a cereal or in cooked dishes. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

WOMEN IN LOVE

By Mae Christie

CHAPTER 30

Why was she dancing with him when he wasn't in her party? Wouldn't Rosalind be angry? Was it because having declined to let him take her to the Opera, she wanted to make it up to him?

Someone was pushing his way through the packed dance-floor towards her . . . taking her from her partner with an: "Excuse me! My turn!"

Dizzily, Ann found herself looking up into the face of the merchandise-manager, which wasn't smiling now, as at the commencement of the evening, but looking rather stern.

But it was fashionable to be giddy at these nightclub parties. Paul was an ogre. "Are you an ogre, Mr. Bradley?" she heard her own voice ask.

"No. But when you're ready, I think it might be a good idea to get away from all this. Time's moving along."

"Don't you like to dance with me, Mr. Bradley?" Lovely how the champagne gave one such a freedom from convention, so that one didn't stick at personal questions. Why shouldn't one find out what was so vitally important as his feeling, or lack of feeling, for her? Weren't inhibitions antiquated?

"Yes. I do love dancing with you. You dance beautifully. But I don't want you to take any more champagne."

The words cut clearly through the blissful haze about her. She stiffened. Drew away. "Let me get my cloak, please."

He caught her to him, the little fracas unnoticed by the other dancers. They moved on.

"I don't want to seem like an ogre or an old grandfather," he told her, and now he was smiling. "You know, Rosalind's drinks are very potent. We've all had plenty. Time to put on the brakes, little girl!"

The diminutive was heartening. She heard her own voice saying, breathlessly: "But I don't want to put on the brakes! I want to be happy, and I'm terribly happy dancing with you! I'm—thrilled!"

The music finished. Putting a strong hand under her elbow, he piloted her up to Rosalind who, as she now expressed it, was "gloriously shemozzled." Rosalind loudly lamented their departure, but insinuated they might have an even better time where they were going . . . attaboy! whoopee!

A big white moon shone over the East River, made the tall buildings seem like fairy castles towering into silvery skies.

It was part and parcel of tonight's glamor, thought the couple who emerged from Il Rococo. There was a line of waiting taxis. Paul hailed one.

He drew out a flat gold cigarette case. "Smoke?"

"Please."

Dreams of Wave

She noted the long, fine lines of the hand that cupped the lighted match he offered her.

And the impulse came to Ann to blow out that lighted match, to do what she had dreamed of doing this past age. To take that beautifully sculptured head in her two hands and draw it to her bosom, running her fingers through the thick, flatly brushed mass of his hair, so that it might rumple into little-boy curls, as she had once seen it in the stockroom when he had lent a hand to a tired employe who was struggling with the heavy bales of silk that had come in from the Orient.

So keen was this primitive impulse—fought down at once, of course—that Ann, her cigarette lighted, took it from her lips and drew a long, deep breath, like a swimmer coming up for air.

"Tired?"

"Not at all. I'd a splendid evening. Did you enjoy it, Mr. Bradley?"

"I certainly did enjoy it. It made me feel—how shall I express it?—young again." He smiled.

"But you are young! It's just having such an important position in the store that makes you feel—well—responsible. Isn't that so?" (How foolish it sounded!)

"I'm a good 10 years older than you, my dear. And a decade makes an awful lot of difference!"

"Why, you're not hinting that we're like May and November?" slipped from Ann. Immediately she thought: "Didn't I once hear him telling a buyer that the greatest fault of women was that they always take the personal angle? Turn every generality to themselves? That it was maddening failing?" And she felt ashamed, awaiting his reply.

Blows Ring

He opened his mouth as though to speak, and then blew a ring of smoke into the air. The taxi swung into Central Park South, and to the left of them, radiant in the moonlight, the Japanese Lake lay dreaming. Through the leafless trees, the myriad lights of great skyscrapers.

"May and November?" he repeated idly. And then he gave a curiously wry sort of grin. "While we're on this subject, what about O'Hallahan? Didn't you give him a good deal of —er—encouragement this evening?"

"Mr. O'Hallahan," said Ann quickly, "is merely a business acquaintance. Please understand that. He wandered alone into the night club, and seeing me a wallflower—a temporary wallflower—came over and asked me to dance the bolero. I love the bolero. He really danced beautifully. D'you think," she added anxiously, "that in view of our business connections, I should have refused to dance?"

"Oh, not at all. There's no reason why you shouldn't, but you must admit you did permit him to monopolize a good deal of your time?"

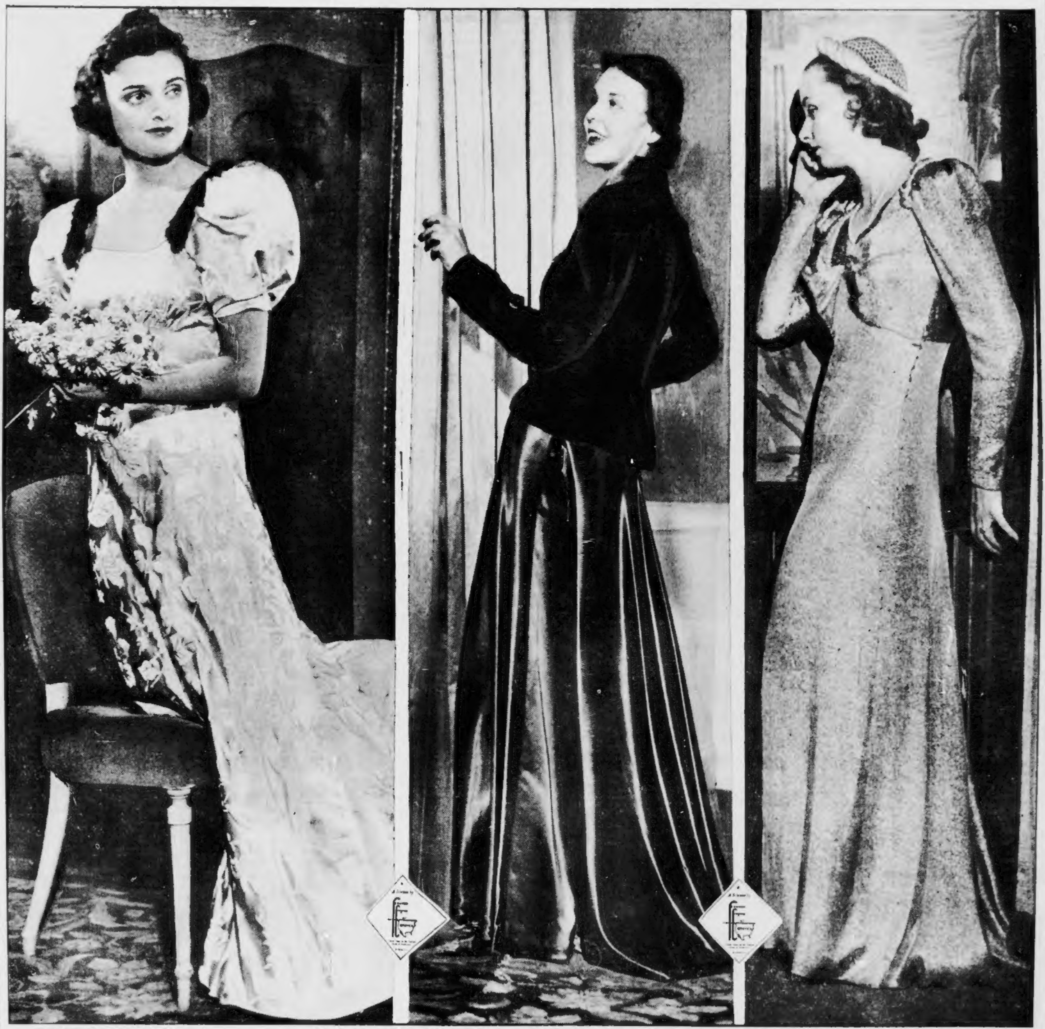
And the Nights Shall Be Filled With Splendor---



YOU'LL DELIGHT in Dalmatia . . . swoon around in chiffons . . . queen it in cloth-of-gold or silver . . . invoke drama in velvet clouded with lace . . . drive your friends to a delicious desperation with a new color that's neither empurpled brown nor bronzed black but glows wickedly and elusively with all these subtle tones . . . or choose a Renaissance gown of old-looking brocade that will live and glow in a portrait of you long after everything else that belongs to 1936-7 looks either hideous or funny. That is only part of the evening fashion story that unfolded before a jury of artists, sculptors, literary men and men-about-town at the Fashion Congress meeting. But it's all summed up in a word that's come out of its hiding place in the dictionary —"Splendor!"

Miss Virginia Phelan, left, is decorated by a Renaissance gown in a color and fabric that should be tucked into the brunette's bag of tricks . . . even though it's called "blonde baroque." It's a pale gold damask, with high, square Italian-princess lines, and mink tails giving a deep accent. Debut, engagement announcement, biggest ball of the season . . . it's that kind of a gown.

Center, Miss Lee Stevenson shows the bronzine slipper satin with matching velvet cut into a pretty mockery of a man's smoking jacket, with satin revers and an eel-slim waistline. The tremendous fullness of satin skirt ends in a ravishing halter-decolletage with emphasized bosom line, and not one trick of clip or bow or accent to spoil it.

A clue to at least a little of Juliet's romantic power . . . she wore frocks something like this one, modeled by Miss Polly Cotter. Cloth-of-silver, it shimmers in lovely and fluid lines from the emphasized shoulders and bosom. Utterly simple, with braids of silver cloth seeming to hold up the decolletage over the shoulders. Perfection itself, the twisted-silver and mesh cap.

MARKING THE SILVER

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

I am thinking of buying for my sister, her solid silver flatware. She desires to have initials on it. Which is better, with or without initials?

BROTHER.

1—Whether or not we have silver monogrammed depends first, on our preference, and second, on the pattern. I very much like to have and to see silver monogrammed, especially if the monogram is a lovely one, carefully chosen and planned and designed to harmonize with the pattern. And this last is very important . . . for it is sad to see, for instance, a very "modern" monogram on a period silver pattern. Just as it is inconsistent to see a monogram of traditional quality on modern silver. But if you purchase your silver from a silversmith or a jeweler of repute he will have a specialist on this sort of thing, who will be delighted to help you in your choice. If your sister prefers to have her silver monogrammed, by all means have it done, for it will add immeasurably to your gift and to her enjoyment of it.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

TO FEEL like a million all the time you are reducing—exercise! It keeps you in perfect shape.

Lazy reducers who skip their calisthenics are quite apt to feel languid and depressed through flabbiness of the muscular system. Moreover, without exercise you cannot lose in the right spots.

Regular exercise is more important than ever when you are trying to lose the more solid fat. Exercise not only aids in breaking down the fat cells, but builds muscular tissue to replace the fat that is lost. This, in turn, stabilizes the weight loss.

When your reducing program reaches an impasse, mark time, subtract calories and EXERCISE. Where there is healthy muscle tissue there can be no fat.

Set your own time for exercise, but make it an integral part of your program. While the time of day is not a factor, it is important to exercise when you are least fatigued. Rapid, spirited, forceful play of the muscles is what you need, and enthusiasm goes a long way toward making the simplest movement effective.

Regularity in exercise is the way to symmetry. Ten minutes of exercise—if taken every day—will do more for your figure than ten times that amount taken spasmodically. It takes time to make your figure over, so don't look for any amazing overnight change in your hipline.

The aim of the General Exercises is to whip up the circulation, increase muscle tone, and so improve your well-being that you can be optimistic even when you are not losing weight. To reduce in spots, however, the muscles underlying the bulges must be brought into the action. For the disproportionate overweights there are specific exercises which can never be used to better advantage than right now. By concentrating your exercises on the bulges, the fat cells are broken down, preparatory to moving with the second layer. Intelligent exercise will not only tide you over a trying period, but will insure a lovely figure along with normal weight.

Massage is also helpful in breaking down the fat cells, but it is no substitute for honest exercise, since the muscular network must be strengthened to bring the form to symmetry. For best results with massage, add exercise.

I FEEL GRAND! LET'S TAKE IN A MOVIE.
5¢ AND 10¢

JOIN the modern women who no longer give-in to periodic pain! It's old-fashioned to suffer in silence, because there is now a reliable remedy for such suffering.

Many who use Midol do not feel one twinge of pain, or even a moment's discomfort during the entire period, including women who have always had the hardest time.

Don't let the calendar regulate your activities! Don't "favor yourself" or "save yourself" on certain days of every month! Keep going, and keep comfortable — with the aid of Midol. These tablets provide a proven means for the relief of such pain, so why endure suffering Midol might spare you?

Midol's relief is so swift, you may think it is a narcotic. It's not. And its relief is prolonged; two tablets see you through your worst day.

You can get Midol in a trim little aluminum case at any drug store. Then you may enjoy a new freedom!

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Can Romance Be Killed By Bad Manners at Dinner Table?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Not a week passes but someone writes to this column regarding his or her table manners.

"My wife objects to my eating with my knife; did you ever hear of such a thing?" An indignant husband writes me, and then mentions his substantial yearly income.

He did not realize that to submit his wife to a sword-swallowing act at least twice daily was something of a strain on her affections.

Likewise, numbers of girls have objected to "soup gurgling" when the boy friend takes them out to dinner.

There are no statistics available to show the number of cases in which bad table manners have pointed the way to Reno, but judging from the number of letters which come to this column about uncivilized eating, table manners may help to send that "one marriage in every six" on the rocks.

The public schools are now taking up the question of how to eat, and how not to eat. Along with the three R's and geometry, physics and English literature—if pupils have gone that far—they are to be taught the proper way to eat, especially how to hold a knife and fork, to drop a napkin over the knee instead of wearing it like a baby's bib, and other tricks of table etiquette.

SCHOOLS PLAN COURSES

So if poor table manners kill love, as I've some reason to believe, the public schools do not intend to be responsible. There remains, of course, the question whether the taxpayers will howl at having any expense that may be involved added to their tax bills.

They may object, indeed, if they began their own study of United States history with the dear old Quackenbos Elementary and recall the story of George Washington, his peas and knife, with an accompanying woodcut illustration.

It seems that an enemy—a Hessian soldier, if memory serves me—managed to secrete poison in a dish of peas that the future President of the United States was about to eat for dinner.

According to Quackenbos, George Washington put some peas on a knife and inquired of the would-be poisoner, "Shall I eat of these peas?"

The history didn't state that Washington intended to eat with his kinfe. He may have used it for the purpose of displaying the peas.

Nevertheless, one can imagine thousands of parents writing to worried teachers: "If George Washington ate peas with his knife, why shouldn't my Sammy?"

GOOD MANNERS NEEDED

The fork should be held as a pencil is held in writing. The fingers are placed nearer the top than the prongs, and the thumb and first finger are closed around the handle, about two-thirds of the way up, and the food is taken, shovelwise, on the upturned prongs.

"Lay-Down" Hands

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Over-confidence has been known to spoil many performances both on the athletic field and in games of mental agility.

Even experts are apt to err when a hand appears so easy that their mental reaction is "Oh, it doesn't matter how I play it."

Few hands indeed are such lay-downs that they can be treated contemptuously or even nonchalantly.

North, dealer.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 N T	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

North had a perfectly sound two bid to start with; he held 6 honor-tricks and less than five losers. His rebid was also on the conservative side. Having started with only one club, he should have attempted to show his great strength by jumping to three notrump over one heart.

When West opened a low spade and the dummy was exposed, the declarer saw that nothing short of sudden death could make him lose his contract. This reflection probably explains his subsequent very bad play.

Winning the first lead in the dummy, he laid down the heart King, and then jumped to the conclusion that it would be a good idea to establish a club trick on which to discard his losing spade. So he went about this by leading the Ace and King of clubs.

He was not greatly disturbed even when West interrupted the proceedings by ruffing the latter, but when the spade was continued and it later developed that West had started out with five hearts, the declarer's chagrin would have been hard to match.

He ended up of course by losing a spade trick, the diamond Ace, and two trump tricks, including the ruff of the club.

It is difficult to explain the declarer's line of play on any other basis than that he had a brain storm. The effort to establish a club trick for a spade discard appears particularly silly, when one examines the diamond situation in the combined hands.

Patently, it would have been a much easier and safer process to have cleared away the diamond Ace, thus establishing a diamond trick for a spade discard. Had this perfectly natural plan been followed, the contract would have been made with ease, despite the very bad break in trumps.

Diets to Keep You Thin and Supple

POSED BY ROSALIND KEITH

Lose Five to Eight Pounds With New Twelve-Day Reducing Method

By DONNA GRACE

THERE are three stages to pass in any routine for reducing.

When we are on a restricted diet or the usual three to five days on liquids, we notice quite a change in the waist and abdominal measurements and just a slight change in the facial muscles. This is the result of the elimination of liquids, but there is very little tissue or real fat reduction during the first week.

All reducers who have tried these intermittent drastic diets, have found their weight will usually be back at the same point after the first few meals of solid food. When the dieting is continued for as long as two weeks, we may look for a loss of weight. This, too, is not really a substantial loss and may be regained in a few days of regular meals.

It is the regular and light diet that really brings results, and if you are not willing to continue with such a course, there is no point in starting it at all, so be sure if you really need to reduce that you will have enough willpower to go through with it.

We know how every extra pound of weight will slow us up, so why not be smart and get down to your own slender figure? I have several diets you will find satisfactory. One is the 12-day diet for a quick effect course of taking off weight all the way from 5 to 8 pounds. Another is a regular reducing diet that is sure to keep you thin and supple.

There is no charge for either. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for each and address Donna Grace, Boston Evening American.

Fashion Flash

You see them in tweeds and furs, velvets and lames, worn by day and by night.

The cape suit is a new success, in rough tweeds, suitable for town or country wear.

Lunch Box Cookies

Bran Date Bars Are New Favorites

By MARTHA LEE

COOKIES for the lunch box! Why not? They may be prepared in advance stored safely in some hiding place and produced with a magician's flourish, for lunch box, luncheon or unexpected guests. Homemade cookies are far better for the youngster than cake or rich pastry.

At our cooking school last Friday at the Dudley Street Baptist Church many women told us they thought the delicious bran date bars we suggested ideal for just that purpose as well as for serving with a cup of tea.

BRAN DATE BARS

- 3 eggs
- 1½ cups brown sugar
- ¾ cup flour
- ¾ teaspoon baking powder
- ½ cup bran
- 1 cup nut meats (chopped)
- ½ cup dates (cut fine)

Beat the eggs until light, add the sugar and beat well. Add the flour sifted with the baking powder. Add bran, nuts and dates. Spread the mixture in a layer one-half inch thick in a greased shallow pan. Bake in a moderate oven (375 deg. F.) for about 20-30 minutes.

Remove from the oven and while warm, cut into squares or bars. Roll the pieces in powdered sugar or serve as a pudding with whipped cream. Yield: 24 bars—1 inch by 3 inches.

Another popular choice is Gingerbread Cookies:

MOLASSES TAFFY SQUARES

- ½ cup shortening
- ¼ cup molasses
- ½ teaspoon soda
- ¾ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 1 cup sifted flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- 1 cup nuts, coarsely cut.

Combine shortening and molasses and cook over low heat 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Add soda and brown sugar, and stir until sugar is dissolved. Cool. Sift flour with salt. Beat eggs until light and combine with molasses mixture, blending well. Add flour and nuts and mix well. Bake in 9x9-inch greased pan in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 35 to 40 minutes. Makes 16.

Married Comrades

I FOUGHT down an impulse to shriek as in my progress through the dark to the orchard in search of Dicky, I stumbled against a human body which twisted away, throwing me to the ground.

How I managed to keep silent, I do not know, nor can I determine how it was that almost at the instant of falling, I rolled over and over like a ball in the direction from which I had come, and then, scrambling hastily up from the ground, ran back to the shelter of the veranda.

It was as if something beyond my own volition directed my movements, as if subconsciously I sensed what a second later my reason told me, that the person against whom I had stumbled had no business inside the farm house yard.

WASN'T CHALLENGED

Any one of the men detailed to guard us, as well as Dicky and Jim, would have challenged me, and would assuredly not have broken away until he had ascertained my identity. No, this person was an intruder, one, who, I was sure, was an accomplice or associate of Jack Leslie in whatever nefarious business he was engaged.

That the intruder was a man I was sure because when I collided with him my outstretched hands had felt the texture of a coat. They had grasped something else, also, to which I still clung, the fob of a watch, with a bit of chain attached to it, which had been torn away from its fastening when the man twisted away from me.

I hurried up the veranda steps, hearing his following footsteps coming ever closer. And I whipped through the door and shot the bolt just as someone came up the veranda steps and crashed against the door in a last mad attempt to catch me.

DICKY IS INFORMED

I pressed a button and threw the hall into darkness. Then I ran lightly to the kitchen, and startling Katie by a command to put out the lights, I threw open the window nearest the orchard and sent out an urgent and loud "Hallo!"

Dicky's voice answered first, heavily fraught with anxiety.

"Yes, Madge. What is it? I'm coming."

"No! Stop!" I called. "We're all right here. But there's a man in the yard who doesn't belong there. I ran into him just now when I was coming to find you. He's running toward the front, I think. When you've caught him, I want to see you a minute, Dicky."

"Okay!" my husband called back, and then I heard low, swift commands, and the sound of running feet.

"Vot matter?" Katie quavered behind me.

"Nothing we need worry over," I told her. "Pull down the shades, closely, so no one can see in, and then light up again. I'll do the same thing in the dining room. What about breakfast?"

"Eferyting all ready before leetle sheep can vag eets tail," she said in the laughable phrasing she always uses to express haste on her part.

"Then I'll get the small boys and Miss Mary down to breakfast," I said. "Mrs. Bickett, Williams and I will eat as we can."

I was overseeing the breakfast of Junior and Roderick, who were so excited they did not want to eat anything, when Dicky came in through the kitchen.

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

All members who plan to enter the big annual indoor model plane championship matches to be held at South Armory Friday, November 27, the day after Thanksgiving, must register on or before Friday of this week.

This blue ribbon classic, one of the two most important model flying contests for Junior Birdmen of the Boston American wing, will decide the New England championship.

Prizes include an all-expense-paid trip to San Antonio, Tex., and the wing trophy for the champion, gold silver and bronze medals, certificates and ribbon awards and special Ace wing-pins. In San Antonio the New England champ will compete against 16 other wing victors for the national title, the William Randolph Hearst trophy and $400 in prize money.

Jack Golden

A rodeo, a flight in an army plane and inspection of Randolph Field are part of the entertainment program arranged in San Antonio for the 17 wing titleholders.

Scores of enthusiastic and ambitious model plane makers have already formally entered the Boston competition. Among the latest are Jack Golden, Brookline, who retired some months ago to give his best energies to tennis.

"Syd" Wallerstein, Roxbury, "on the fence" for a time, finally decided he couldn't afford to miss the opportiunty to try for the chief prize. Lawrence Krueger, Roslindale, also is in. Sanford Oringer, Dorchester, will be on hand. He recently missed his third chance to be elected commander of a Junior Birdmen squadron at English high but was named model plane director instead.

A lot of builders have been needlessly worrying about Rule G in the cabin model event which with the glider event and the hand-launched stick model event makes up the all-day contest.

This rule, embodying the elimination of booms, should be read carefully. It simply means that the cabin must be constructed as one unit. Tail plugs or a small opening are permitted in the end of the cabin to gain access to the motor and motor hooks. If the part from the plug to the tail assembly is built up it is eligible.

I'D NEVER GO BACK TO ORDINARY SHORTENING. SPRY IS WHITER, SMOOTHER
I LOVE SPRY BECAUSE IT'S PURER ALL-VEGETABLE, STAYS FRESH ALWAYS
THEY TELL ME THAT IN MANY CITIES MORE THAN HALF THE FAMILIES HAVE USED SPRY
FOODS FRIED IN SPRY ARE AS EASY TO DIGEST AS IF BAKED OR BOILED

BOSTON WOMEN GO WILD ABOUT SPRY

New shortening wins 3 million users all over the country in 3 months

GOOD old cooks and June brides join in praising Spry. And no wonder! The second you open the can, you see the difference. Spry is whiter, smoother, purer.

But when you use this new ALL-vegetable shortening, you're even more delighted. Spry creams in a jiffy, blends with other ingredients much more easily. It makes all baked and fried foods doubly delicious. Cakes are marvelously light and fine-textured. Biscuits are amazingly tender and fluffy. Pastry is flakier, more delicate in flavor. Fried foods are crisply golden, done to a turn—and as easy to digest as if baked or boiled.

Try Spry in your favorite recipes. Just taste the difference and you'll never go back to old-fashioned shortenings! You'll see instantly why thousands of women say it's easy to be a good cook now.

A joy to use

Spry stays fresh and sweet right on the pantry shelf. Never gets chilled or stiff. It's always ready for quick, easy creaming. Blends so thoroughly with other ingredients that all your baking is wonderfully light and tender. Lets you fry whenever you want, for it fries without smoke or unpleasant odor. Spry doesn't carry over flavors either—you can use it again and again. Get a can of Spry from your grocer today. No risk to you. Read our daring offer.

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK

Buy a can of Spry from your grocer. Use all of it you want. Give Spry every test in pies, cakes, biscuits, fried foods. If you don't find Spry absolutely the best shortening you've ever used, write to Lever Brothers Company, Cambridge, Mass., stating briefly your reasons for not preferring Spry. Send your name and address and the strip of tin that the key takes off when you open the can. You will promptly receive back twice what you paid for Spry. This offer is limited to one can to a family.

Boston Debdom Well Represented At New York Debuts

By BETTY ALDEN

THE OLD ORDER changeth and so does the old-fashioned idea about home-coming for Thanksgiving . . . For it seems that, instead of family gatherings at New England country homesteads, a great many Bostonians are going down to New York for their turkey and cranberry sauce . . .

RENEE SCHANCK

New Yorkers may say Boston is provincial, but they haven't a Harvard University a few miles away from which to draw the masculine eligibles necessary for the success of every deb party . . .

Princeton, Yale, Cornell and a number of other men's colleges are just far enough away so that the boys must wait for week-ends or vacations to attend New York affairs . . .

Consequently most Gotham mothers of debs save their parties for the Christmas and Thanksgiving holidays when the town is full of gay young blades, who troop about from one party to another . . . sometimes taking in five or six in one night . . .

With all this Manhattan hospitality crowded into the few days before and after Christmas, it is not surprising that most of the Harvardians, and even Boston debs, forsaking Beacon Hill and the Back Bay, go down to New York . . . leaving only the younger folks to hang up their stockings . . . and the older ones to fill them . . .

So, though Betsy and Marian McKean and Phyllis Howe are going down especially for the dance which Mrs. Frederic R. Kellogg of Morristown, N. J., is giving for her daughter, Cornelia, at Pierre's on the 28th, they will probably take in any number of other dances . . . and have a little North Shore reunion with the folks from home whom they meet at Renee Van Nydeck Schanck's big ball at Pierre's the preceding evening . . .

Cornelia Kellogg was in Boston last week-end to see her brother, Edmund, at the Harvard Law School, and incidentally to take in Phyllis Howe's dance at the Ritz and the game Saturday . . . Susan Morse of Weston and Lucy Stone of Milton are going to be at the Kellogg party and will be house guests of Susan's aunt in New York . . . and some of the companions of Edmund Kellogg on his trip over to Gotham will include Lloyd Brown, Samuel Cabot, Jr., Benjamin Beale and Joe Frothingham.

Renee Schanck will have a large North Shore contingent at her dance . . . with Eleanor Coolidge, Oliver Simpkins, Bunny Jones, Evelyn Lilly, Patricia Phelan, Marie Palmer, her brother, Harold Palmer, and George Wadsworth all planning to be on hand to remind Renee of her carefree summer days in Manchester . . .

Concert Attracts Fashionables

THE WEATHER is always a universal topic of conversation . . . But there are occasions, like last evening, when it becomes more than a sociable discussion . . . and begins to be a social problem . . .

It is difficult to put together a formal outfit which is at once modish as well as warm . . . Even all the Milton friends and neighbors who came in to Jordan Hall for Rose Hamlin's concert kept their fur coats on over their usual evening wraps and left only a peep of taffeta and silk showing around their ankles.

Some of the conservative Back Bay gentlemen decided the icy blasts called for more than ordinary fortification and selected modish fur-lined coats from their mid-winter wardrobes . . .

Mrs. Hamlin, who was Rose Bryant, daughter of the Lincoln Bryants of Milton, has been singing for her friends ever since her Winsor School days . . . and patrons of recent Vincent Club shows have often heard her melodic voice in prominent solo parts . . . but this was her first public concert . . . and must have been a trying ordeal . . .

Gold and Gun Metal Color Gown

SHE LOOKED as calm as a cucumber when she came out on the stage for her first group of songs . . . and was one of the most attractive little figures we have ever seen on the concert stage . . .

The material of her gold and gun metal color gown was stiff enough so that the skirt stood out in fan shape all around her and the bodice was very low and shirred into a brilliant clip . . . Nearly every singer chooses a large chiffon handky to hold and hers was jade green to match her slippers . . .

Her sister, May, shivered in the lobby while waiting for other members of the family to arrive . . . her black velvet gown brightened by scarlet slippers . . .

Mrs. George B. Dewson was accompanied by her two daughters, Ada Dewson and Mrs. Parkman Dexter Harding . . . Anne and Jane Donald came in from Milton to hear their neighbor . . . Eleanor Williams of Needham was another younger member of the music-loving crowd present, and the Theodore Lyman Elliots sat down front where they could chat with Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Bryant during the intermissions . . .

Jane Ragle at Many Fetes

FOOTBALL WEEK-ENDS take Jane Ragle away so often that she has a difficult time getting in all the parties of her sister debs at home . . . She was in Gotham this past week-end after the Yale-Princeton game . . . is back today for Peggy Pierce's luncheon at the Robert Herricks' Beacon street home, and will be off to Gotham again the end of this week for the parties after the Harvard-Yale game . . . Peggy Pierce and her mother, Mrs. Robert Herrick, Jr., are entertaining about 70 debs at an informal luncheon . . . Katharine Metcalf and Mary Ann Lippitt came up from Providence for the party.

Style Show At Bridge

The All Souls Lend a Hand Club held its silver jubilee bridge and fashion show yesterday afternoon, to celebrate its 25 years of service.

The ballroom at the Copley-Plaza was appropriately decorated with silver balloons and large silver cellophane bows for the occasion. The twin debutantes, Anne and Clementine Hobbs, acted as models in the fashion show and displayed some unique effects in outfits, which were made exactly alike but of different colors. Ruth Watters, another of the season's debs, also took her turn on the runway to model a shell pink velvet negligee with a marabou cape.

Mrs. Melvin M. Johnson, Jr., (Virginia Rice) the tennis star, modelled a black bolero dress with royal blue blouse and wide sash. Mrs. Donald Morse displayed a traveling suit trimmed with silver fox. Caroline Oveson introduced a novel note by modelling the latest coiffure.

Mrs. William D. Luhrs, who was in black crepe, and Mrs. E. Melville Hill, who wore a deep rose metal cloth tunic dress, co-chairmen of the jubilee, had a busy time keeping everything running on schedule. Jane Matthews was also busy keeping her candy girls supplied with plenty of stock. Virginia Richmond, Frederica Sargent, Sally Scudder, Betty Prescot and Lewis Watson were the candy girls.

It proved to be a jubilee for Mrs. Fred Stuart, for she won a large Sheffield silver tea tray, and Mrs. E. M. Lamb won the drawing on a white and silver cake.

Rooney Girls Sponsor Dance Friday Night

FOR A GOOD evening of dancing and a heap of fun, the dance which the Mary Frances Rooney School of Elocution is sponsoring Friday night at Longwood Towers promises to hit the high-water mark in the tidal wave of late fall functions.

The decorating of the Charing ballroom has been detailed to Mrs. Rene Lezezzola and her committee, which consist of Louise Mooney, Anna Murphy, Anne Doherty, Helen Murphy, Margaret Kelleher, Eleanor Noonan, Anne Messit and Dorothy Welch.

Reservations and refreshments are in charge of Betty McKenzie and Helen Kennedy.

No dances are on the program of the New England Federation of College Catholic Clubs. The group's sold on the idea of improving its mind, so it seems from the series of Sunday night lectures which it's sponsoring at St. Cecilia's Hall.

"My Ideal of Catholic Youth" is the subject which Mrs. Vincent P. Roberts, president of the Philomatheia Club, will discuss at the opening talk Sunday evening.

On the following Sunday night, Matthew Copithorne, head of the English department of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will lecture on "G. K. Chesterton," November 29.

At the conference on Catholic Action, slated for December 2, 22 delegates will gather to discuss "Catholicity and Communism in Literature and Art."

Planning this series of worthwhile lectures are Eleanor Freeley, chairman of the New England Province; Henry Guerke, Catherine Kelly, Anne Laverty, John McDonough and John Henry Lawton.

Red-letter day on their calendar is next Sunday when delegates will gather for memorial mass and breakfast. Parker House is the setting for the affair which is chairmaned by Henry Guerke. Rev. Joseph Maxwell, S. J., dean of Boston College, will be the day's guest speaker.

Serving on the committee for the annual affair are Barbara O'Hagan, Marie Maguire and Genevieve Corea.

THE LANGUAGE OF HARLEM AND VARIOUS little Harlems scattered [illegible] Eastern seaboard has a meaning of its own. [illegible] colored communities north of the Carolinas are known in Harlemese [illegible] ... The deep South is known as "Bam" ... If you are a [illegible] you dress to perfection by [illegible] standards, or you [illegible] savoir faire ... "A [illegible]" is a mud [illegible] head, an ignoramus ... "Bad Boy" means a stool-[illegible] ... "Banjo [illegible]" is a yes man, or a flatterer ... [illegible] Ethel Waters [illegible] "big top," [illegible] first-class theater or cabaret ... A [illegible] cheap cabaret is [illegible] show ... "Boots on" means a [illegible] fellow or a copper who can't be [illegible] ... "Chicken dinner" is a young girl, and a man [illegible] ... "Ground pads" are shoes, and "gut bucket" [illegible] or a person who has the blues ... [illegible] sometimes a know it al ... "Ice Cream Man" [illegible] and "Jake What a Snake" is a top man ... [illegible] is any preparation to straighten kinky hair [illegible] and [illegible] is straightened art[illegible] ... "Minus guy" is one heavily in debt or [illegible] without funds ... "Kicks" means terrific [illegible] liquor of any kind is [illegible] is a woman of the streets ... [illegible] married woman ... A white person is an "ofay" [illegible] ... A bow [illegible] lady or gent is a [illegible] the latest accepted expression [illegible] ... "Sold murder" is a [illegible] Robinson or Chuck and [illegible] ... [illegible] one who impresses well ... [illegible] and "turn up" is getting [illegible] ... This column's "tunin' up" about [illegible] and here it is ... [illegible] in town for an opening Thursday at the Boston, makes this space Harlem minded ... Because she's "kicks."

Autographical:

Eddie Cantor's most amusing experience in the Hollywood hills, he says, came from an experience with a woman who begged him for his autograph on the grounds that she was a native New Yorker. The woman asked him to sign both sides of a slip of paper. She got the two autographs, examined them carefully and turned to her companion. She said:

"Did I tell you? Such a big actor and he doesn't write any better than my boy, Morris!"

Once Over Lightly:

U. S. S. [illegible] the destroyer [illegible] by sabotage while buil[illegible] dry docked again at Charlestown ... An [illegible] is under way ... Laborers this time [illegible] and photographed ...

Three matinees are set for "Dead End's" first week (next week) at the Colonial, Wednesday, Thanksgiving and Saturday ... Some official in Palmer has the bankbook of a Revere family mired in red tape. The bankbook was forwarded three months ago to guarantee $10 bail on a speeding charge ... George T. Cullen, the Malden boy who went up-and-up in the hotel business so that he now is co-owner of the Hotel La Salle in Chicago, is in town ... Jack White's hilarious description of a Tenth Avenue Christmas Eve: "And the old man with half a load came sneakin' up the backstairs, a flexible flyer on his back!" ... Tess Gardella is regarded as the holiest woman on Broadway ... Dorothy Rich is at the Club Chesterfield ... The urge to be a piano-player comes when Ed De Lange sings "More Than You Know!" It would be great merely to accompany him ... Eddie Britt next year will be one of the outstanding backs in pro football, Ray Flaherty predicts ... Win Brooks' promotion to assistant managing editor is the second big job entrusted in a year to a Boston boy who began his newspaper career with this paper ... John Noonan, executive city editor, was the other ... Mysel, the X-ray mind currently functioning in the Keith salon, predicts that Ann Lawless, the reporter, will "cover" the coronation ...

One of the department stores hangs signs in the elevators which read: "This operator's hair has been done by our beauty shop." For compensation for their modelling, the elevator girls get beauty treatments free ... And the folks are doing Christmas Shopping already ...

[illegible]

Theatrical Stuff:

[illegible] York night clubs, will be in the cast of "New Faces" for the Boston showing ... She played the New York run, but couldn't double for the Philadelphia engagement between the show and her night club ... So she's giving up the night club job to play Boston ...

Signing Off:

They have taken down the sign which mysterious persons (believed to be Democrats) posted at the border of New Hampshire and Maine. As you left New Hampshire, the sign warned: "You are now leaving the United States."

Chatter:

Premiere of Lou Walters' new show at Levaggi's Flamingo Room last night revealed (and how) twelve attractive chorus-girls who can dance like demons, a teeming personality who is versatile in a platinum-tressed girl named Chick Kennedy, a swell dance team called Fox and Ames, a hoydenish dancer who is very good, too, named Patricia Moran ... The orchestra, Rudy Bundy's, is a new-coming organization, and excellent ... It's the most undressed show in Boston, with the possible exception of the Blue Room.

Pension Provisions Made Clear

Who's Exempt From Tax?

Some Queries Answered

[illegible]

All Alike

[illegible]

A.—No, they will not. One of the nine classes of workers exempted from the provisions of the act is employes of any government agency, town, state or federal.

[illegible]

A.—No, you will not. You are already paying more than the social security act provides for, and you will get a larger pension in proportion to your present salary than [illegible] under the act. As a city employe you are exempt.

[illegible]

A.—You must pay the tax, and you will be eligible for old age benefits just like everyone else. The pension is not based on need but on what you pay into the government's pension reserve. The government is not concerned with what you may have in your old age from other sources.

State's Function

[illegible]

A.—You are a wage earner and [illegible] the act. Your employer is a contractor and he is [illegible] for a pension. He must, however, pay the payroll tax on your salary. It makes no difference whether a worker is paid by the day, week or month, or according to the amount of work he does. This is a matter of indifference to the government. So long as you are paid wages, whether by the hour or the board foot of lumber produced, you must contribute to the old age pension reserve and you will thus qualify for a pension. Remember, where the government does not pay a pension, it does not tax for a pension.

FORD

THE ADDITION of a new 60-horsepower engine to the Ford line for 1937 brings you a new, low price and gives you a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engines. 85 horsepower for maximum performance. 60 horsepower for maximum economy.

In basic design, the new 60-horsepower V-8 engine is a replica of its famous older brother—the V-8 "85." But its reduced size and weight make possible a lighter car, with lower operating costs, and the lowest Ford price in years.

The 60-horsepower engine was originally developed for use in England and France, where fuel costs are high and fuel economy is vitally important. It has been proven there for two years with brilliant success. Now, brought to America, it creates an entirely new standard of modern motoring economy!

The "60" engine is built in exactly the same body size and wheelbase, to the same advanced design, with the same comfort and convenience as the "85." It has all the distinctive Ford features for 1937. And it delivers V-8 smoothness and quietness at speeds up to 70 miles an hour.

Two engine sizes—but only one car and one purpose—to give you more miles and more satisfaction for your money in 1937. We invite you to see this very modern car at the showrooms of the nearest Ford dealer.

Dorothy Peterson, screen actress, who plays one of the lead roles in the quins' new film, "Reunion," has become well acquainted with the famous babies. She never misses an opportunity to play with the little quins. Here we find her, between scenes, giving the girls a bit of advice on how to keep trains on the track. The quins are, left to right, Marie, having a toy bear "for lunch"; Annette, who prefers to stay in the background; Emilie, who seems to agree with Miss Peterson; Cecile, who is asking her sisters for their undivided attention; Yvonne, who seems to be putting her stamp of approval on Miss Peterson's actions. The new quin film comes to the Metropolitan Theater soon.

HARVARD PLANS TO FOIL KELLEY

AUSTEN LAKE

Cassidy's Folly: Slugging, Scandal, Kelley and Wilson

Austen Lake

MOST HILARIOUS PIECE OF STATECRAFT ever submitted to Beacon Hill's political papas is that being sponsored by Thomas F. Cassidy, member of the state racing body, who asks that it become a mandatory six months' jail sentence for any member of the Governor's Council, representative or senator to ask the Race Commission to procure jobs at local horse or dog tracks for their friends.

Now if Mr. Cassidy, who paints pari-mutuel betting as a malignant growth on the social body, would make his motion retroactive, most of the statesmen could, by voting their own incarceration, be eligible to spend next winter on the cuff at one of the Commonwealth's penal colonies where slate-gray is de rigeur dress and the guests dine daily on beans and bread pudding under the watchful gaze of gun-toting chaperones.

SOMETHING ABOUT "SLUGGING"

MOTION PICTURES CURRENTLY DISPLAYED at a local theater of the famous "slugging" episode in the Minnesota-Northwestern game, when Ed Widseth was penalized 12 fateful yards to the Gophers' one-yard line and a subsequent Northwestern touchdown, show nothing conclusive. Movies, with their lack of perspective, never do

ATTEMPTED BRIBERY

UNPARALLELED IN SCHOOL OR COLLEGE football is the tale three Haverhill High players tell about a "ring of gamblers" who are alleged to have offered them $25 each to whoa down against Lawrence High last Saturday. The boys rejected the suggestion and reported to their principal.

To the great credit of football there has never been a larcenous scandal in its half-century record, despite widespread recruiting and subsidising practiced by many institutions, or the irresponsible remark by John R. Tunis in a late issue of American Mercury that games "are frequently thrown." Nor would it be difficult for the practiced eye of a team's coach to detect any mysterious failures on the part of a star whose capabilities he has measured to the last ounce of energy.

KELLEY'S MEASURE OF MANHOOD

SOME MEASURE OF THE ATHLETIC stature of Yale's Larry Kelley is shown by the fact that, though patrolled closely by opposing players, he has seldom missed scoring one or more touchdowns in major games.

SYMPATHY FOR WILSON

PITY THE POOR race-writer like Dave Wilson, who follows the sun, spending his summers in New England, his late autumns in a gradual retreat down the Seaboard, and his winters at Tropical Park and Hialeah. In his 34 years of life Wilson has never seen snow fall except in premature, unseasonal flurries. He has never owned an overcoat or mittens. Nor since the age of 13 has he ever been out of sniffing distance of the ammonia, scorched horse hoofs and timothy hay odors of the horse barns. His is a life of genial hardship, up with the first shell-pinks of dawn for occasional clocking, working in the afternoon hurly-burly of the race crowds, and bedding down in the bowl-and-pitcher hotels.

Harvard Plans 'Hot' Welcome For Loquacious Larry

ELI LEADER POISON TO RIVALS

[illegible]

Hot Welcome

However as good as Kelley is, he's going to be given a hot reception when he tangles with Harvard ends, Green and Daughters, and the Crimson backfield of Wilson, Struck and McTernan, Saturday.

These boys know all the answers [illegible] are particularly well versed in the language of Kelley—they

[illegible]

The boys worked in the field blasts of the Stadium from 4:10 to 5:10. They brushed up their passing game, touched on their weak defensive spots and wound up the session with a signal drill.

Every member of the squad was out on the field and ran through the practice session. [illegible]

Surprise Move

There were no changes in the personnel of the first two teams, with one exception, and even that only a tentative arrangement. Bobby Green and Don Daughters were at the wing posts of "A" team. Al Kevorkian and Joe Nee were at the tackles. Jim Gaffney and Charlie Kessler filled in at the guards and Bobby Jones was over the ball. The backfield was altered slightly. Cliff Wilson, Mal McTernan and George Roberts held down their regular positions but Vernie Struck was back at fullback in place of Bill Watt.

The work of Struck was outstanding against Navy and his long run after the interception of [illegible] Antonelli's pass in the final chukker was the highlight of the game. The man he displaced, Bill Watt, also

A surprise move yesterday saw Georgie Hedblom, dynamic lightweight take his place in the second team backfield. Hedblom's spirited play against the Middies Saturday was directly responsible for the second Crimson score and his offensive charge three weeks ago ignited the spark that fired the Crimson team to a score against Dartmouth.

[illegible] George Ford has never been able to reach the heights he vaulted to in his previous Yale encounters.

Two years ago, although the team was defeated 14-0, Ford was the outstanding back on the field [illegible] through a heavy Yale [illegible] ease, and [illegible] year George came [illegible] the leather.

Four seniors, Jim Gaffney, Bobby Jones, Charley Kessler and Mal McTernan, will be on the starting line against the Yales . . . Gaffney, varsity captain, strangely enough, was only a substitute tackle on the Freshman eleven that walloped the Yalies 31 to 6 . . . now he is regarded as one of the finest guards ever turned out by the Cambridge school . . . Incidentally, Larry Kelley, the most talked-of end in the country, and present Yale captain, didn't see action against the Harvard frosh in '33 . . . Austin Harding, the sophomore who tossed the second touchdown pass to Phil Staples last Saturday is almost a certain regular for next season . . . If he packs on a little weight . . . The Harvard Frosh team has been using Yale plays all season

YALE Put Colwell ON SPOT

AILING STAR HIT HARD

In the event that Dave Colwell, who was sent into the Princeton game less than three weeks from the date of the removal of his appendix, suffers any serious ill-effects from the terrific block he was hit on, that Ken Sandbach to Charlie Kaufman forward pass, the Yale football authorities will come in for some well warranted adverse criticism.

The outcome of no football game is worth the gamble Yale took by sending Dave Colwell into the Princeton game.

During the warming up session before the game Colwell took his [illegible] with the other Yale punters, but it was very apparent that his recent operation was a handicap to his kicking.

The Rat Trap

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY: "Caught like a rat in a trap!" That's a pretty moving expression. When you say that of [illegible] you mean that he's in pretty dire straits—facing a [illegible] beasts. [illegible] WITH rats [illegible] and hundreds of rats [illegible] set for them yourself." That's what Charley Moss was up against. And it's an experience he doesn't want to go through again either.

Charley's home is in Brooklyn, N. Y. In 19[illegible] he was working for an exterminating concern and on a day in [illegible] of that year he was ordered to the [illegible] Basin section of Brooklyn to take the job of [illegible] ing out a [illegible] steamer that was overrun with rats.

Two other men were working with Charley on that job. They arrived at the ship at 10 o'clock on a Sunday morning. The job had to be done on Sunday when the crew was off duty so as not to interfere with the loading of freight. The only man aboard the ship was the watchman.

On reaching the ship, the exterminators' first job was to get every human or animal on board out of the way. The watchman was notified to stay in the open, and the mate's dog was given to him to take care of.

[illegible]

The three men proceeded to the rat-infested parts of the ship. "My section of operations," says Charley, "was the galley, which [illegible] the worst infested part of the ship. After a [illegible] I put on my mask and set off the cyanide fumes. I stepped into the [illegible] box and waited until the fumes were [illegible]. Then I went to the door to [illegible]. My first [illegible] came when I found that when the [illegible] the latch had dropped into the socket on the outside, making me a prisoner.

[illegible]

[illegible] Charley. By this time the fumes [illegible] and the rats began to feel the effects of [illegible] It was a [illegible]

"Then, suddenly, one of them more keen than the others sensed a slight trickle of air coming through a small crack in the door at which I was standing. He ran over to my feet. In a split second the rest had followed—a fighting, snarling, biting horde of brutes, jumping on one another until they were piled ten high, trying to get their snouts in that little crack which let in a bit of precious air.

"Luckily," he says, "my clothes were of heavy material [illegible] I was wearing. Believe me, I began [illegible]. My [illegible] began to feel the bites of the maddened creatures [illegible] I had to put my hands in my [illegible] pockets to keep them from being bitten off.

"There I stood for what seemed hours, with hands in my pockets, my elbows tucked in, and my head down on my chest to protect as great a part of me as possible. I waited—waited for the gas to take its toll, but the seconds seemed like hours. My mind began to play tricks on me, making me think the gas was weak—wondering what would happen if all three of us were caught in the same jam and had to stay there all night. What thoughts you have when you're in a predicament of that sort!"

Charley's coat and trousers were in shreds. His legs were running with half a hundred rat bites. "I'd rather fight a mad police dog than one of those rats," he says, "and the memory of those animals lingers to this day." But at last there came a knock on the ice-box door, and Charley heard the voice of one of his co-workers asking if he was in there. Charley yelled back that he was trapped, and the other fellow opened the door.

"Then it was the other fellow's turn to get a scare. Rats—almost a hundred of them, burst out of that door in a snarling, fighting mass and began dashing about the galley. They were plenty weak by that time and the fresh air took their attention. That was lucky for the other fellow, too, for they forgot to bite him. Some of the critters scrambled along the deck and others seemed to go crazy and throw themselves in the water. Others ran a short distance and dropped. It was a great sight—and just about the most shivery I ever saw in my life."

Charley went to a doctor and had the rat bites treated. None of them got infected, and he was all right in a short while. As a matter of fact, he was back on the job again the next Sunday—exterminating rats on the same ship. The job hadn't [illegible]

LATEST Boom FACTOR

PROFITS SURTAX

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service)

New York, Nov. 17—The latest manifestation of boom tendencies in corporate practices was inspired from a new source, the government, especially in relation to the new punitive undivided profits tax.

T[illegible] invited corporations [illegible] to purge themselves of [illegible] earnings in order to minimize [illegible] tax liability. In the 1929 boom inspiration came more largely from investment banking and manipulative [illegible] Yet even in that period [illegible] began to [illegible] of market advisers.

REASONS For Foreign BUYING

OF AMERICAN SECURITIES

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service Financial Writer

New York, Nov. 17—With President Roosevelt viewing with alarm the tremendous foreign buying of American securities, the general public may wonder why there has been and is this influx of investment and speculative money from abroad.

The reasons are as follows:

1. An [illegible]

2. A [illegible] abroad that the American dollar is undervalued [illegible]

3. The [illegible] Europe with the United States considered the safest haven in the world for money.

4. A belief that the United States [illegible] the world [illegible] is heading [illegible] great boom that may even eclipse the one of 1928 and 1929 and in a shorter space of time.

5. The [illegible] dividends on American stocks [illegible]

6. [illegible]

7. [illegible]

8. The cheap money policy of the American government [illegible]

1. The [illegible] tax which [illegible]

2. The large bond refunding operations [illegible] two years [illegible] former investors [illegible] to seek higher yields in speculative stocks. This has accounted for much of the cash [illegible] of securities, a feature of the bull market for the last year and a half.

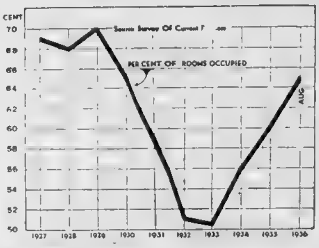
HOTEL BUSINESS PICKS UP



August Best Since 1929

Preliminary reports indicate that this will be the biggest tourist, recreational and travel year that the country has experienced since 1929.

One method of [illegible] whether or not the travel industry is picking up is to examine the registers of hotels and see what percentage of their rooms were occupied.

The solid line on the chart shows that in 1929 hotels had an average of 70 per cent of their rooms [illegible] In 1933 only [illegible] per cent were occupied. In August of this year [illegible] per cent of hotel rooms [illegible] the highest [illegible] 1929.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Nov. 17 Odd lot brokers have experienced a considerable increase in five, ten and twenty-five share buying for public account recently.

The expansion has been particularly [illegible] since the [illegible] of distributing [illegible] dividends became widespread following the election. The [illegible] explanation in this connection [illegible] many traders are [illegible] the proceeds of these [illegible] to buy additional small [illegible] of favored shares for cash. At the same time brokers report a growing practice on the part of customers to withdraw realized profits from accounts in order to prevent "freezing" of these funds in the event of a market break and impairment of existing margins.

How is the railway revenue dollar being spent? A new compilation by the Railway Association shows that 45 cents of the dollar [illegible] went for wages. Another [illegible] went for [illegible] The carriers spent 16.2 cents of each $1 for other material and supplies and miscellaneous expenses. About 8 cents went for loss and damage, depreciation, insurance and pensions. Taxes took 6.9 cents. Rent of equipment and joint facilities cost 3.4 cents. The balance available for interest, rentals, etc., was 14.5.

European Nations Curb "Import" Funds

The move contemplated by the administration to exercise control over the ebb and flow of foreign funds for investment in this country is looked upon in certain Wall Street quarters as nothing more than has already been accomplished in the [illegible] markets. According to [illegible] Rhoades & Co. [illegible] effect British authorities must approve any major transfer of funds over sterling exchange to overseas investment." Supposedly authoritative banking opinion here is that this bars only sale of new foreign securities in the London market and does not apply to private investment. However, it is recalled that the English authorities have refused to approve a deal that would have transferred control of Gaumont British to American interests.

Rail Net to Be Best Since 1930

Indications are that aggregate railroad net income this year will reach $150,000,000, against a net loss by class I roads of $[illegible] 19[illegible]. It would be the best showing since 1930, when combined net was $[illegible] 907,000.

Net results for final quarter will be decisive as to the total for 1936, with high better than seasonal since Oct. 1, pointing to a somewhat better showing than in first three months of 1935.

Net of $150,000,000 or better for 1936 would represent the first major extension of the recovery in rail earnings since the initial upturn in 1933. With gross likely to top $4,000,000,000, slightly [illegible] or about 16 per cent over 1935, total net operating income should reach $650,000,000, up [illegible]0 per cent over last year.

This gain is after allowing for tax accruals of around $[illegible],000,000 under the Railroad Retirement Act now under attack in federal courts and of around $20,000,000 for unemployment insurance provisions of the Social Security Act.

Prospective earnings results for 1936, pointing to increased efficiency and lower costs, also make favorable comparison with 1931, the last year in which net income was reported. Although gross this year will be slightly less than the $4,188,000,000 for that year prospective net operating income for 1936 is 2[illegible] per cent over 1931.

Non-operating income on the other hand, representing return from outside investments, will probably be about 45 per cent less than the $305,000,000 in 1931, with the result that increase in indicated net income over that year will be little more than 10 per cent.

General Foods To Pay "Extra"

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—General Foods Corporation today announced an extra dividend payment of 45 cents a share common, aggregating $2,363,148 and a [illegible] wage bonus to employes.

Those in the [illegible] before [illegible] 1936 will receive [illegible] extra [illegible] while those [illegible] date will receive [illegible] weeks [illegible] compensation.

NATION Continues UPSWING

AUTO INDUSTRY TELLS STORY

By STANLEY CARROLL

Washington, Nov. 17—The steady rise in the national income—reflected in wage increases and employment gains—is daily drawing the nation further into the circle of prosperity.

From 81 billion dollars in 1929, the income produced by the people of the United States had shrunk in 1932 to 39 billion. Today the situation is reversed. The national income last year soared to 53 billion dollars and this year [illegible] at [illegible] billion.

Profits of [illegible] corporations scattered throughout the country decreased from $4,182,000,000 in 1929 to $[illegible] in 1932. Last year they jumped more than 400 per cent to $1,7[illegible] and comparable data for 1936 indicates a further gain of [illegible] per cent.

STOCK VALUES UP

Stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange in October 1929 were valued at $87,073,000,000. By March 1933 they had declined to $19,700,000,000. On October 1 of this year they had leaped 180 per cent to $55,100,000,000.

Railroad car loadings and revenues, accepted as important barometers in measuring national [illegible] have soared consistently [illegible] the last two years. In the first eight months of this year net railway operating income was 145 per cent above that of the comparable 1932 period.

Loadings of revenue freight for the week ended October 17 totaled 826,156 cars, a new 1936 high and the fourth successive week in which loadings exceeded 800,000 cars. This figure was the highest since 1930.

Representative railroad officials are confident the carriers will "get by" the present peak of loadings, but if present traffic gains continue they anticipate a serious shortage of freight cars next year unless additional equipment is purchased. They estimate 150,000 cars must be added next year.

RAIL EQUIPMENT

Coming on the heels of the large orders placed for new rail equipment this year, these new cars will do much to give new impetus to the steel industry. Orders for equipment in the first nine months of this year were nearly double those of last year. On October 20 industries engaged in supplying rail equipment had 131 inquiries for locomotives, inquiries for more than 13,000 freight cars for domestic service and 1100 for export.

That the generally improved picture is carried down the line through retail channels is apparent from a study of commerce department reports. These give every indication that retail sales this year will exceed those of 1935 by a substantial margin.

In the first nine months of this year retail sales in metropolitan areas topped those of the comparable 1935 period by 11 per cent; in rural sections they were up 14 per cent, variety stores, up 7 per cent; chain groceries, 3 per cent and chain drug, 6 per cent.

AUTO EXHIBITS DRAW CROWDS

W. R. Tracy

Public enthusiasm for the new automobile models now on exhibit at auto shows throughout the United States has mounted to its highest degree since 192[illegible]

This was the statement today of W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales of the Hudson Motor Car Company, who [illegible] from D[illegible] to [illegible] meet [illegible] and attend the [illegible] Auto Show.

"New operating economies and pronounced improvements are in part responsible for this increased interest," he said.

CONSTRUCTION

Big Gain SHOWN In 1936

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The revival of the construction industry, while not in the spectacular stage, bids fair to prove one of the outstanding industrial developments this year.

The improvement shown by the motor and steel industries has more or less overshadowed the gains reported by builders and tends to obscure the importance of construction in an era of prosperity.

There has been much talk of government sponsoring home building on a broad scale as well as continuing its various public works projects. Both mean added momentum to recovery of construction. But the really important thing is private enterprise. When individuals finance and build on their own initiative the recovery is real.

Thus we find the latest report of F. W. Dodge Corp. of particular interest because it shows private building operations for October exceeded public construction for the fifth month this year. The total of both for the first ten months of this year was 63 per cent greater than the corresponding 1935 figure. And private activity for the full period totals just a bit lower than the figure for public projects. 1937 looks like the year construction would emerge from its depression just as motors did in '35 and steels did this year. And further than that a good part of the 4,000,000 eligible unemployed that Harper Sibley, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce spoke of in Washington the other day should find jobs as a result.

Notebook: The aviation group continues to show those occasional flashes of power that we think portend higher prices all around . . . In addition to the two low-priced issues, Aviation Corp. and North American Aviation, we like Curtis Wright "A" and Sperry . . . Both act well on the tape and on the charts appear to be ready for a move . . . Pullman has been called to our attention as a rail equipment issue likely to benefit by the call for both passenger and freight cars next year . . . And, besides that, is expected to show net for this year not far from dividend requirements.

We are inclined to give the market an even chance to reach new highs. But with reservations. Industrials, as a group, seem well situated and, if the aviations, oils and specialties perform as expected, this section might make a top 2 to 4 average points above that already registered. But, since we think the next important stock market policy will be concerned with liquidation and not accumulation, we will not repurchase the 25 per cent of holdings sold last week. If accounts do not have some of those issues considered to be favorably situated, it would be better to make room by selling.

* * *

Ticker Talk: In the event market action does develop as outlined above, we do not expect a smooth move . . . Erratic, jumpy are more descriptive of what we have in mind . . . Southern Pacific has not experienced the let-down in grain shipments some forecast . . . Instead totals are running ahead of last year . . . At the same time dividends from Pacific Fruit Express are encouraging bulls . . . But in general rails appear to be in a poor position and traders should look elsewhere for the present for profit opportunities.

AIRCRAFTS IN LATE WHIRL

New York, Nov. 17—Stocks swept upward fractions to 2 or more points in today's market as an avalanche of increased dividends and other favorable business news stimulated a sharp buying revival.

The ticker tape was almost continually behind floor dealings in the morning with large blocks of the favorites changing hands at advancing prices. The activity dwindled later, however, and a little selling was in evidence near the final hour.

Boardroom sentiment was lifted by a brisk rally in the recently backward rails. The aircrafts, including Douglas, Boeing and United, were given a late whirl.

European currencies were moderately lower in terms of the dollar. Convertible bonds were in demand. Commodities were slightly mixed.

Besides the rails, merchandising, amusement, copper, rubber, farm implement and equipment shares were in the forward thrust.

Outstanding on the upturn were Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Louisville & Nashville, Delaware & Hudson, Southern Railway preferred, Montgomery Ward, Macy, Woolworth, Spiegel-May-Stern, Safeway Stores, Paramount, R. K. O., Loew's, General Theaters Equipment, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, American Locomotive, Baldwin preferred, Childs Company, Lehigh Valley Coal, Westinghouse, Continental Oil, Atlantic Refining, North American, and Electric Power & Light.

Signs of rapidly expanding net income for the principal moving picture companies, with hopes this will be translated into generous disbursements to stockholders, provided renewed stimulus for the amusement issues.

Timely Items

On the basis of early reports trade observers placed last week's department store business throughout the country at about 25 per cent above that of the like 1935 period.

Analytical quarters, basing their views on the possible extent of the public spending movement, were predicting this year will be the best in the history of the automobile industry insofar as the distribution of new cars is concerned.

Sterling was ⅛ of a cent lower at $4.88⅝ in initial foreign exchange transactions, and the French franc was .00⅛ of a cent at $4.64⅞ cents.

Comments Of Brokers

The favorable outlook for purchasing power indicates that demand will be well sustained, and probably increased, thereby making the longer term outlook for busines very encouraging.—L. S. Feigus—Prentice, Blauner & Brady.

As a trading proposition, a sideline position appears advisable, pending more definite indications of a new trend. Meanwhile, should a number of leaders dip through their lows of last Saturday, believe still lower levels should be awaited before making new purchases.—H. D. Comer—Paine, Webber & Co.

With business news continuing favorable and more favorable dividends actions ahead, it is more than likely that Monday's advance represented a renewal of the upward movement in which event the recent highs for the bull market might be tested.—J. S. Wilson—Josephthal & Co.

While market action, in our opinion, is not subject to definitely unfavorable interpretation, a lot of questionable symptoms have appeared in recent weeks. They would seem to call for more conservative speculative policy.—G. M.—P. Murphy & Co.

The outlook for the investment market as a whole is not one calculated to cause anxiety.—F. H. Richardson—Southgate & Co.

Under the circumstances we would prefer to treat the current upturn from the point of view of its being purely a technical affair, until an opportunity has been afforded to ascertain the longer term significance of what has occurred the past week. J. E. Molloy—Hornblower & Weeks.

There can be sufficient selling by those who expect an early 1937 letdown to produce spasmodic irregularity, but such offerings are not likely to be important enough to change the main bullish trend of the market. J. P. Maher—Shields & Co.

Construction Up In Ten Months

A 63 per cent increase in construction in the United States occurred during the last 10 months over the corresponding period in 1935, F. W. Dodge Corporation reported to Public Works Administrator Ickes.

Private construction jobs are keeping pace with public works, the report said, and in October private construction awards exceeded public construction awards for the fifth time this year.

Commenting on this, the PWA said:

"This fulfills the original PWA theory and premise that a revival of the hard-hit construction industry, through public works building, would be paralleled by recovery of the industry in private construction."

N. E. TELEPHONE $2 Dividend

A fourth quarter dividend of $2 was declared today by directors of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, payable on Monday, December 21, to stock of record at close of business Friday, December 4.

The declaration, coupled with previous declarations of $1.50 in each of the preceding three quarters, brings the year's total to $6.50, which, it is expected, will about equal the year's earnings.

Cotton Limit Set

Board of Managers of the New York Cotton Exchange has voted to set the maximum limit of interest on future contracts for delivery in any one month by any member, firm or corporation, and his or its affiliations, at 250,000 bales for delivery in November, 1936, and in all months up to and including October, 1937.

Hard Coal Shipments

Shipments of anthracite for October, as reported to the Anthracite Institute by originating rail carriers, amounted to 3,942,486 net tons, an increase over September of 14.62 per cent, and an increase of 7.10 per cent over October, 1935.

Pure Oil Co.

Directors of Pure Oil Company authorized call of $1,000,000 of 15-year 4½ per cent sinking fund notes January 1.

Delays Offering

United States Casualty Company has filed an amendment with the SEC changing date of proposed public offering to December 7.

U. S. DEVELOPING

New MIDDLE Class

By B. C. FORBES

Is bigness in business desirable or undesirable?

Could legislation be passed to stop growth?

Should such legislation be enacted?

The problem is many-sided. It cannot be disputed that our giant enterprises have been mainly responsible for winning America's industrial leadership of the world.

Nor can it be questioned that many of them have done more for the working conditions and the well-being of their workers than small concerns have been able to do. That the mass production brought about by big corporations has tended to increase production efficiency and to lower prices is generally admitted.

* * *

But what effect has the enormous multiplication of big business had upon the nation's middle class? Has not the tendency been to wipe out myriads of small business men?

May it not be that a new middle class has been coming into existence?

Are not the vast majority of corporation employes of executive rank entitled to be regarded as belonging to the middle class? And what of millions of individuals and families who have been able to save considerable money and have become owners of investments? Is a skilled workman earning enough pay to acquire his own home, life insurance, a substantial savings bank account, and in a position to give his children a thorough education, properly classifiable as of the middle class?

Certain it is that all these groups enjoy more of the conveniences, comforts, luxuries of life than were within reach of the middle class of a generation ago.

The economic tide in this country has been flowing strongly towards bigness.

Take retailing. The expansion of chain stores has been phenomenal. Various state governments, viewing this with alarm, have passed restrictive, punitive laws designed to discourage their continuance and growth.

One illuminating incident on November 3 was the submission to the voters of California of the question whether chain stores be legislated against there. The verdict of the voters, of consumers, was against such legislation.

Whether federal or state legislation could abolish the age-old law of the survival of the fittest is open to question.

Let us survey what has happened and is happening in different industries.

No fewer than 1000 automotive companies have been launched during the brief lifetime of this industry. Today only two score are in existence. Three motor manufacturers produce 94 per cent of America's total output.

* * *

Also of the nickel, aluminum, lead, sulphur industries.

We have only three or four towering packers.

In the steel industry there was for years only one overpowering giant. One other has since attained impressive stature and two or three others have more than held their own.

A handful of companies swing the copper industry.

Giants have also arisen in the office appliance industry.

The telephone business provides another conspicuous example of the survival of the fittest.

The movement in rail transportation is towards the creation of a few magnitudinous systems, towards the absorption of small railroads.

Goliaths have also come into existence in the electric light and gas industry.

* * *

Whatever the soundest answer may be, assuredly no hasty, half-baked legislation should be undertaken.

CUBAN SUGAR Exports Increase

Exports of sugar from Cuba during the first 10 months totaled 2,289,235 long tons, against 2,226,232 in like period of 1935, Department of Commerce reported.

Shipments to United States aggregated 1,482,566 long tons during the period, against 1,467,204 in same period in 1935.

Fox Film to Pay

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation declared a dividend of $1 on the common, payable December 11 to stock of record November 27. On October 23 an initial dividend of $1 was paid on the issue.

4,000,000 NEW CARS IN 1937, FORECAST

By BYRON C. FOY

President, De Soto Division of Chrysler Corporation

The automobile industry has already answered with action the question, "What About Business for 1937?"

Not in the last decade have manufacturers' expenditures for new plants, new equipment, tools and dies run as heavy as they have in preparation for 1937.

Byron C. Foy

Automobile centers are humming with an activity unmatched since 1929. Optimism is "in the air." Enormous new machines, ordered early in the year, have been installed; complete tool-up programs have been completed; and beautifully designed cars are rolling off the assembly lines at a pace that forecasts the best year in automobile history.

De Soto is well prepared for 1937. We have erected a completely new plant in Detroit; one that we feel is the most modern and efficient in the entire industry. Millions of dollars have been invested in the physical structure of this plant and in the biggest tool-up program in our history.

The press plant unit, where all heavy stamping work will be done, is a model of "daylight" construction, with walls and ceilings that are almost solid glass—ideal for the safety and comfort of workmen.

Giant Bear Visits Greenfield Camps

Greenfield, Nov. 17 (AP)—With nothing more deadly than a frying pan in his camp, Myron Warner reported today he had reason to be startled when he glanced out his window and saw a huge black bear in his yard.

The bear, he said, sharpened its claws on a walnut tree, leaving deep gouges seven feet from the ground. It moved on to a pen of cackling hens, curiously observed them for a moment, and then allayed Warner's suspense by sauntering back into the woods.

Two Engines Available in Ford Trucks

Choice of power to fit individual transportation requirements and smart new lines feature the Ford Motor Company's 1937 truck and commercial cars stated M. J. Heller, N. E. Truck manager.

"Two engines are available in the new line of trucks and commercial cars, a new 60-horsepower V-8 engine for house to house delivery and other light duty and an improved 85-horsepower V-8 engine for operations requiring greater power," he added.

"The new 60-horsepower engine is the same in quality and design and is made with the same precision as the improved 85-horsepower engine. Its bore is 2.6 inches and its stroke 3.2 inches.

"Modern styling as well as utility have been incorporated in the design of trucks and commercial cars. Radiator grille bars are horizontal. Hood louvers and radiator shell are of new design, and de luxe equipment is available.

"The truck chassis is offered in two wheelbases, 131½ and 157 inches. Panel, stake and hydraulic dump bodies are supplied on the 131½-inch chassis. Only the 85-horsepower engine is used in the dump truck.

"This chassis is also supplied with cab for tractor service and for mounting special bodies. The 157-inch chassis is offered with stake body and with or without cab for mounting special bodies.

"The brakes on the 1937 Ford trucks have been substantially improved. They incorporate a new type of adjusting wedge for the brake shoes. The advantage of this new design is that it provides uniform clearance on each brake shoe between the brake lining and the brake drum whenever brake adjustment is made.

"Ford truck brakes have unusually large brake lining area, totaling 470½ square inches. Brake drums are cast alloy iron, ribbed for increased strength and quicker cooling.

"The commercial cars are equipped with the new Ford Easy-Action Safety Brakes. Their self-energizing action increases brake effectiveness and permits lower pedal pressure.

"All 1937 Ford V-8 engines feature a new type piston. Cast of a new alloy having a rate of expansion corresponding to that of the cylinders, the new pistons can be fitted with less clearance than non-ferrous pistons, resulting in longer life, increased power and reduced oil consumption."

Banner Year Looms For Automotive Exports

By ROBERT C. GRAHAM

Executive Vice-President, Graham-Paige Motor Corp., Chairman, Export Committee, Automobile Manufacturers Association.

A move toward the reduction of tariffs and the elimination of other trade barriers already under way in many European countries coupled with the steady improvement in world business gives definite promise that 1937 will be a banner year for automotive exports.

The most important recent factor in this improved export situation is the devaluation of the franc and the corresponding announcement that the United States, Great Britain and France will co-operate to maintain the relative stability of their respective currencies.

With this revaluation of the gold bloc currencies, international trade enters the final quarter of 1936 and looks toward 1937 with a far more encouraging outlook than seemed possible six months ago.

The present program of the gold bloc countries is one of the most promising factors in improved international trade since the administration's policy of reciprocal trade was adopted in 1935.

In addition to the improved European situation American automobile sales continue to rise in South Africa and there is every indication that the demand for them in that quarter will continue. South American countries likewise have become better customers of our American automobile factories.

A brand new feature for 1937, the rubber poised body, makes its first appearance this year among the models on display at the Automobile Show here, stated Ray Smith of the Boston Regional organization.

Regarded by some as the major development in riding comfort in recent years, the new feature is introduced by Plymouth, pioneers of hydraulic brakes and Floating Power.

It involves an entirely new method of mounting the body on the frame, so that the whole body is pillowed on live-rubber cushions which are free from the compression of body bolts that destroys rubber's resiliency.

A brilliant feature of the new Plymouth body mounting is the manner in which the live rubber cushions are freed from the paralyzing squeeze of body bolts, so that they carry only the weight of the body with full efficiency.

Outrigger brackets attached to the Plymouth frame carry these new spool-shaped rubber mountings of special design. At the core of each spool-shaped cushion is a metal spacer that takes the pressure of body bolts. Thus the rubber spool is free to work with full resiliency, in its snugly-designed, special fixture that brackets to the frame.

Popular Model

Most popular car in the entire Ford V-8 line for years has been the Tudor sedan. The 1937 edition is shown above. The smart new front end, new headlamps, V-type windshield and use of the "tear drop" form wherever practicable, combine to give what those who previewed it declare to be the most beautiful Ford yet produced. The front seat is full width. Seat back is divided, either section tilting forward.

FLOORS OF NEW CARS LOWERED

Car floors in the new Pontiacs have been lowered three inches in the rear compartment and two inches in the front. By slanting the floor slightly from midship forward and toward the center and by means of a new propeller shaft made in two parts, it was possible to keep the floors flat and eliminate all tunnels.

For 1937 Pontiac and Fisher body engineers have added the tilting seat as a part of the front seat adjustment.

The President Gives Encouragement

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT may be expected again to set the pace for his own Administration, and indeed he is doing so now in his discussions of problems and issues of immediate and pressing concern to all the people.

He has already had occasion to state his intended policy toward many of these vital matters and everything that he has said he is going to do has been encouraging to the country's hope for a sustained advance toward normal conditions.

Thus the President, outlining his plans for the future, has revealed an appreciation of the things the people most desire.

His pledge of a balanced budget at the earliest possible time consistent with the current commitments of the Government is encouraging to those who understand the peril of continued spending beyond the limits of revenue.

His confidence in the ability of the Government to avoid the necessity of imposing new tax burdens upon the people gives new courage to those of his countrymen upon whom the pressure of taxes rests most heavily.

His proposal to effect consolidation of departments and to accomplish needed reorganization of Government activities on a basis of efficiency is universally approved.

His new approach toward solution of problems affecting agriculture and labor has been indicative of his desire to restore these essential elements to a prosperous and productive place in the national life.

President Roosevelt has taken up his new responsibility with the attitude of a man inspired by the mandate of the people and humbled by it.

He gives evidence of an earnest devotion to the task, not only of justifying the trust placed in him, but also of earning the confidence of those who have hitherto opposed him.

An Able Report on the State of the Navy

THE ANNUAL report of the Secretary of the Navy, stressing the urgency of bringing the American Navy to a position of parity among world powers, is an able presentment of defense needs.

If this is properly interpreted as the intention of the Administration to press for a more adequate Navy in Congress, the nation may look to the future with assurance of security.

Secretary Swanson reveals considerable anxiety for the future naval program, not only as it affects replacements and additions to the fleet and its auxiliaries, but also as it relates to personnel.

He notes that recent increases in enlisted personnel and officer requirements are not sufficient for proper manning of all vessels, old and new, that mobilization would place in service.

The Secretary's insistence upon a Navy strong enough in all its branches to assure national safety in an emergency, and upon adequate manpower, must have the IMMEDIATE ATTENTION of Congress.

Provision for the officer requirements of the Navy will never be fully made until the need of training facilities on the Pacific Coast is recognized.

A "West Coast Annapolis" is one of the vital needs of the Navy, to assure adequate manning of the fleet under the pressure of an emergency.

SECRETARY SWANSON deals effectively, too, with the need of putting the American Merchant Marine on a defense basis, CAPABLE OF GIVING THE NAVY THE AUGMENTED AUXILIARY SUPPORT ESSENTIAL TO MOBILIZATION.

The substance of the Navy report seems to be that while a comprehensive program of naval action has been instituted, a lapse in any part of the program must be guarded against.

Mr. Swanson's evident concern is for a steady upbuilding of the Navy based upon his knowledge that the Navy of the United States has not yet overcome the losses in strength and prestige suffered throughout the prolonged era of "naval holidays."

Significantly, the United States has emerged from these holidays with a Navy far less able to cope with future emergencies than the navies of other countries supposedly as fully committed to the "holiday idea" as was America.

This deficiency must be overcome, AND QUICKLY.

THE report of the Secretary of the Navy is an enlightening analysis of the prevailing defense situation, and its recommendations are deserving of the closest study by the Congress and by the people.

The best peace talk Americans can hope to hear is the planning of a Navy that will give an enduring quality to the peaceful relations we now enjoy with the rest of the world.

Good News for Workers

ANNOUNCEMENT of wage increases totalling more than five million dollars for forty-seven thousand New England industrial workers was news that belonged in big type on Page One, where this newspaper was pleased to display it.

Even better news was the report that many other employers, following the lead of the steel and textile industries, plan to participate in the salary restoration program.

This is real evidence that private industry, though severely affected by the prolonged depression, desires to maintain wage schedules that rise in proportion to living costs.

In Lawrence, one of the first Massachusetts cities to be visited by the business crisis, the consideration for workers' welfare is especially apparent. There more than twenty-three thousand men and women are to have their pay raised ten per cent.

The increases throughout New England will be VOLUNTARY concessions on the part of employers. They are granted without strikes, labor difficulties of any kind, or government intervention.

They offer new proof that industry's future lies in the co-operation of employer and employe, with a mutual regard for the common good.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Nov. 17—Few celebrities of the New York parade have so completely withdrawn from the spotlight as Alexander Woollcott. Conspicuous for years as a dramatic critic, quondam actor and a streak in the Algonquin's literary pastrami, he is now seen but seldom. A radio talk now and then and that is all.

O. O. McIntyre

Over night he chucked his page in The New Yorker and got out of reach of the frantic editors. He withdrew from regular radio broadcasting when he could avail himself of a number of choice offers. Magazine editors find him vague in their overtures. Also book publishers.

He disposed of his East Side apartment, "Wit's End." And the haunts he used to grace now and then see him no more. Naturally there are flocks of rumors as to the why of his evanishment—and, like most such rumors are likely bunkered in mere guesses.

Some say he is intent on conquering the obesity that besets him. Others say he plans to make the most of a college trusteeship and lead the cloistered life of a savant. Still others say it's a mere Garbo shrink from the furore—he wants to be alone!

One of the old newsstand girls at the old Waldorf, Mary Doyle, has unleashed her memories in a book describing that mirrored, red plush and lump gilt period. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish is described as the social queen, a bright feral figure with no visible eye-brows who wore at all times, on her ample bosom, a young haystack of orchids or lilies of the valley.

Then there was Benjamin Duke, the millionaire, who seemed loneliest of all the Peacock Alley wanderers. He loved old hymns, collected and hummed them as he strolled about. The Waldorf hived many rich eccentrics.

No hotel today has the spacious public rooms of the old Waldorf. Space has become too precious. There were a dozen nooks as large as the foyer of, say the Ritz Carlton of today. The out-of-town newspaper room always attracted me. Here I could peruse the Kansas City Star, Louisville Courier Journal, Manchester Guardian and other favorites.

I remember one day looking up to observe that my neighboring peruser was William Jennings Bryan, wide hat, black shoestring tie, boiled shirt and all. His awareness somehow pinged me into a panic. I ground out my cigarette, having read that he abhorred them, and tip-toed out.

Filling station lingo: A certain type of motorist is known as an I. W. W. to attendants—Information, Wind and Water.

Aftermath. I visited the other evening in a home of gentle folk, a watchmaker and his white-haired wife. They had a Belgian born maid—the substantially built, high cheek boned Flemish type of the Rembrandt prints. She had gone through the war and saw her entire family massacred and her home in smoking ruins as she fled in her night dress. A reflex from the horror is an uncontrollable blinking of the eyes.

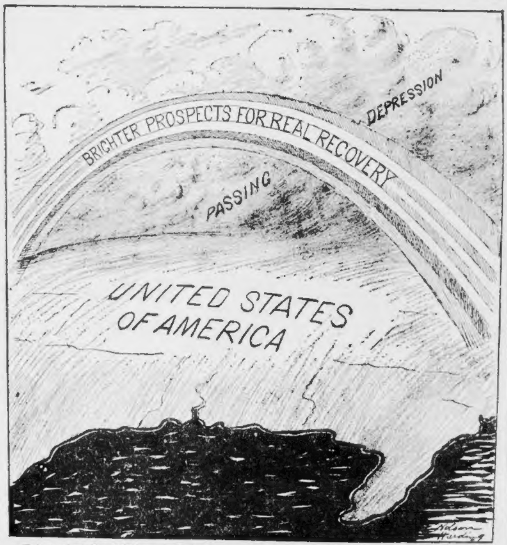
An indefatigable worker, she cannot stand a sudden noise. It causes her to stand in her tracks and tremble as though in seizure of an ague, and is followed by a freshet of tears.

The snack bar business has become one of the surprise commercial mushrooms—like the Tom Thumb golf craze. And so tempting are the displays of tid-bits that restaurateurs are yowling they are killing off their dinner trade. The idea is making New York a 5 to 7 p. m. town. With the snack snaffiers so packed with yum yums and drink by dinner time, they go home to sleep it off. The intimacy of the places is welcomed by the attitude strikers.

The outfittings of the snack bar consist of a wise-cracking bar man, a dozen revolving bar chairs and a strolling guitar or accordionist. Plus the rumor that Tallulah Bankhead or a visiting Robert Taylor may pop in any moment.

The Rainbow -:- -:- -:- -:-

By Nelson Harding



Fair against the drifting cloud banks
Disappearing in the distance
Shines the brilliant bow of promise
As the thunderstorm is passing.

Sign that the long rain is over
And the sun is once more shining.
Clear and bright the welcome rainbow
Arches high across the nation.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

How would you act at a lynching? You THINK you know. But I wonder!

We were talking about that, the other day—a bunch of newspaper people. About the strange tricks life plays on you sometimes, exposing sides of your natures you'd vow didn't exist . . .

Elsie Robinson

And someone recalled that ghastly lynching at San Jose, when two kidnapers were dragged from their cells, beaten, mutilated, killed in a long agony, while thousands watched gleefully . . . squealing, capering, clawing at the bloody tatters of flesh . . . women holding babies high to see the whole horror.

An appalling thing. And in San Jose, of all places—placid, rose-wreathed "city of churches." Well, you never could tell, we said—shuddering—each of us sure that WE were the exception. Other people might be betrayed by their emotions . . . run amuck . . . behave like savages . . . but we, WERE DIFFERENT.

Our chatter ran smugly on. Only the I. N. S. man was silent. Queer, for J's usually in the thick of things. Big, easy going fellow—everybody likes him—good fun at any "talk session." But this time he wasn't contributing.

YOU'D FOLLOW CROWD

"You're just kidding yourselves," he said. "All this talk about what you would or wouldn't do at a time like that . . . I'm telling you, you don't know. Chances are, you'd do just what everyone else was doing, no matter how bad—"

"But — a lynching!" This was a bit thick—intimating we are all potential murderers. But maybe he was fooling us? J. answered our outspoken question defiantly.

"I know what I'm talking about. No—I'm not proud of it. Anything but! It's one of those things that shakes your faith in yourself forever. But there's no use pretending it didn't happen. It DID. That's why I know what I'd do at a lynching. For I was there . . . at that San Jose one . . . and I did it. Went clean off my head like the rest of 'em. Mobbed the jail . . . helped drag 'em out . . . stood right under them while they were strung up . . . watched the whole show . . . and yelled, all the time, like a Comanche."

Incredulous stares. J . . .! Quiet, friendly, kind hearted J. . . . who wouldn't hurt a fly . . . helping at a lynching? Incredible!

"Yeah—I know. Doesn't sound possible. And I'd have vowed—just as you would—that it couldn't happen to me. Didn't even expect to be there, but I had to cover the story. Thought I'd stick around on the outskirts—do my job, and get out of it. But . . . well . . . that's what happened.

"It got me. I tell you, it gets everybody. One minute you think you're a decent, civilized human being. And the next—there you are, howling, foaming, a blood-thirsty savage!"

"But suppose," someone asked, "suppose they'd been really innocent?"

IT GETS YOU!

"Wouldn't have made any difference. I was too far gone to care. Guilty or innocent, it had me. And just wanted to see somebody hanged. Rotten admission? Sure. But I'm telling you—it works like that. If you get in a mess like that—IT GETS YOU!"

"IT GETS YOU!" There's the final, bed-rock truth about violence. If you hang around, it'll get you. No matter who you are, or what you've done in the past . . . the jungle gets you, if you go mixing in.

It gets you BECAUSE IT IS ALREADY IN YOU.

Beneath our noble ideals, our refined standards, there's a grinning, yowling, blood-stained savage lurking in every woman, every man.

AND WHEN THE TOM-TOMS BEAT, BEAST CALLS TO BEAST!

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

The 77-million-dollar, eight and one-quarter mile-long bridge linking San Francisco and Oakland is a great monument to American engineering genius and vision. It can be spoken of only in superlatives. It is the most costly bridge in the world. It spans the longest stretch of navigable water ever bridged. Because it will be more convenient to motorists and will save several minutes on each crossing, traffic tolls are expected to pay for the bridge in 20 years. People will pay to save their time whether it is valuable or not.

When engineers can accomplish such a marvelous feat as the construction of this San Francisco Bay bridge, it may seem strange that their brains cannot evolve a solution of the economic, social and financial problems which harass the modern world. But in building a bridge, engineers know how to use steel, concrete and other materials of which that bridge is to be constructed. They know how these materials will perform when they are put in place. In dealing with social, economic and financial problems, everything depends upon the human elements involved. And nobody knows how they will act.

After the formal dedication of the bridge, automobiles began crossing it at the rate of 200 per minute. The toll charge is 65 cents for each car carrying not more than five passengers. Five cents additional is charged for each extra passenger. Operating the toll collection system in such a way that traffic won't be hopelessly congested at each end of the bridge is quite an accomplishment in itself.

No one should be surprised by the announcement that a survey is to be made of WPA activities with the view of dropping from the rolls persons who no longer need government aid or who can be cared for through old age pensions and other welfare programs. With the steady improvement in business and industry, more private employment undoubtedly is available.

Alchemy of Today

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Can man make gold from a baser metal such as lead, copper or zinc? The answer to that question, which has perplexed scientists and pseudo-scientists for centuries, seems to be "yes" and "no."

Edwin C. Hill

Five years ago Guglielmo Marconi said in Rome that the world was on the verge of a most frightful economic panic because science had almost reached a point in its advance where one element could be changed into another at will, even lead into gold.

Early this year, Professor Partington, of the University of London, leagued himself with a group of research men for the purpose of ending all this talk of alchemy and of proving that a man cannot make gold out of base metals.

"Almost everything in this age has been debunked thoroughly," said Dr. Partington, "and now we are going to debunk alchemy. We are going to convince the world that nobody ever could, except possibly by a tremendous development of modern electrical knowledge, involving a heat equivalent to that of a star, produce gold from any other metal."

Professor Partington's opinion is not wholly shared by the laboratory men of the United States. Not a few of these believe that the necessary electrical knowledge and the necessary electrical energy is available for the task. Gold may be made, they think; but they point out also that most likely it will cost a good deal more to make than it will be worth, once it is produced.

IT HAS BEEN MADE

In fact, gold has been produced artificially in minute particles by the atom-smashing gun used by Drs. Lawrence and Cook, at the University of California. The gold they made was transmuted from platinum, and platinum costs more than gold.

Alchemy is old and yet it is ever new. Honest men and charlatans have had their minds on it since the Greeks of Alexandria passed on the thought of it to the Arabs of the first century of the Christian era. The search for "the soul of mercury" which was believed to hold the key to transmutation, was all the rage in the Middle Ages.

The alchemists didn't find what they were looking for, but they did lay the foundation of modern chemistry. Roger Bacon, Paracelsus and Raymond Lully believed that gold could be produced from other elements. Their task, as they saw it, was to separate from mercury the four elements of Aristotle, "earth, air, fire and water."

Modern science gets down to the soul of the mercury in the atom. The atom, which is the smallest indivisible chemical unit has turned out to be a complex structure with a nucleus, protected by an energy barrier. The job, since Marconi spoke five years ago, has been to break through that barrier, which the scientists in California appear to have done.

Only last November Professor Lind of the University of Minnesota repeated Marconi's prophecy of the nearness of transmutation of baser metals to gold. He added that while the cost of transmutation might be greater than the cost of gold, this would be a temporary situation.

VISIONS CHEAP GOLD

Eventually he thought gold would fall from its proud position as the standard of monetary values.

"Nothing stands in the way," wrote Professor Lind, "except the energy barrier. This can be overcome at a cost. What the price will be is the only question. All present indications are that it will be beyond our reach. But modern science has a long reach. Price levels have often fallen before its march. The possibilities become broader with each advance."

We may expect—in fact, we have already—a flock of swindlers attempting to cash in on the gold-making experiments of science. They have bobbed up in Germany, France and in this country. A word to the gullible should be sufficient. That word is that you cannot make a particle of gold from platinum without an eighty-ton electric magnet and when, if ever, gold is produced from baser metals in any quantities, it will be worth a dollar a pound.

The Red Cross

By Benjamin DeCasseres

The annual roll call of the American Red Cross once more directs attention to the universal law of compensation, so beautifully expounded in the famous essay of "Compensation" of Ralph Waldo Emerson.

The Red Cross, whose business on earth is one of universal mercy and alleviation of suffering in times of great national disaster, more particularly on battle fields, is the compensation that an obscure psychological law offers for the growing horrors of modern warfare.

The compensation for sharper international hates and the barbarous destruction wrought by modern engines of war is a growth of the spirit of mercy and common human treatment for the wounded without regard to the side on which they have fought.

The result is today that wherever Mars and his destructive machines go there follows fast at his heels the flag of the Red Cross, the gentle hands of gentle women and the field hospitals for friend and foe alike.

"FLOWER OF MERCY"

For the Red Cross knows no country, no enemy, no "cause" except the cause of combating pain and the evil that man doeth under the sun in the name of some spurious "ideal."

Dunant had been horrified by seeing thousands in agony on the battlefields of Europe because there was no medical assistance.

The first meeting of the international committee of the Red Cross was held in Geneva in October, 1863.

Clara Barton, whose name is forever associated with the American Red Cross, also was inspired in her great work by the battlefields of the Civil War and the Franco-Prussian War.

While Dunant was working in Europe for an international mercy society, Clara Barton was organizing military hospitals on the battlefields of the Civil War.

It was Clara Barton who was the author of the American amendment to the Constitution of the Red Cross, which provides that the society shall distribute relief not only in war but in famines, floods, earthquakes, and cyclones and pestilences.

IN PEACE AND WAR

Whether it was the yellow fever in Florida, the Johnstown Flood, the famine in Russia in 1891, the massacres in Armenia in 1896 or the Galveston hurricane, Clara Barton, like an eternal spirit of help in the midst of a calamitous world, was there.

Today the Red Cross is universally regarded throughout the world as an institution that combats not only the evils of man but the blind will of Nature when that will works to our destruction.

It is on this law of a compensatory good for every evil from which mankind suffers, and which the Red Cross so supremely illustrates, that the human race keeps its head up.

There is a moving equilibrium of good and evil in the world, and if life SEEMS more ruthless today than it was formerly it is an error of our sometimes pessimistic temperament.

Compare the helpless plight of peoples in ancient times before the realities of war, famine, flood and earthquake with the peoples of today.

Today mercy and help are organized. Such organizations as the Red Cross were inconceivable not only in Graeco-Roman days but even in our own historic time.

"Progress" has no other meaning than the blunting of the edges of human and cosmic cruelty.
